Notes on Contributors

Catherine Schenk is Reader in Economic History at the University of Glasgow. She is the author of Britain and the Sterling Area: from devaluation to convertibility in the 1950s (London, Routledge, 1994) and Hong Kong as an International Financial Centre; emergence and development 1945–65 (London, 2001). She is currently working on a study of British management of the decline of sterling from 1958 to 1971.

Simon Kitson lectures in French history and politics at the University of Birmingham. He has published extensively on various aspects of the history of the French police and on counterespionage. He is currently completing the manuscript of a book concerning police and politics in Marseille.

Filipe Ribeiro de Meneses is Lecturer in Modern History at the National University of Ireland, Maynooth. He is the author of União Sagrada e Sidonismo: Portugal em Guerra (1916–1918) (Lisbon, 2000), and Franco and the Spanish Civil War (London, 2001).

Emily McCaffrey was awarded her Ph.D. from Melbourne University and works as a Research Assistant in the field of eighteenth- and nineteenth-century French political, cultural and social history. She has published several articles on the Cathars and regional identity.

António Costa Pinto is Professor of Modern European History and Politics at the Institute of Social Sciences of the University of Lisbon. His publications include Salazar's Dictatorship and European Fascism (New York, 1994) and The Blue Shirts. Portuguese Fascism in Interwar Europe (New York, 2000).

David Roberts is Professor of Modern European History at the University of Georgia. His recent publications include Benedetto Croce and the Uses of Historicism (San Francisco, 1987) and Nothing but History: Reconstruction and Extremity after Metaphysics (San Francisco, 1995). He is currently working on a book reassessing the origins of totalitarianism.

John Foot is Lecturer in Italian History at University College London. He has published widely on the history of Milan, urban history and cultural history, and is

Contemporary European History, 11, 3 (2002), pp. 505–506 © 2002 Cambridge University Press
DOI:10.1017/S0960777302003120 Printed in the United Kingdom

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777302003120 Published online by Cambridge University Press

author of Milan since the Miracle: City, Culture and Identity (Oxford, 2001) and editor (with John Dickie and Frank Snowden) of Disastro! Disasters in Italy since 1860: History, Culture, Politics (New York, 2002).

Harald Wixforth is Research Fellow at the Hannah-Arendt-Institut of the TU Dresden, participating in the research project 'Die Dresdener Bank und der Nationalsozialismus'. His publications include Banken und Schwerindustrie in der Weimarer Republik (Cologne, 1995) and Auftakt zur Ostexpansion. Die Dresdner Bank und die Umgestaltung des Bankwesens im Sudetenland 1938/39 (Dresden, 2001).

Renaud Payre teaches history and social sciences at the Institut d'études politiques de Grenoble. He is currently completing his doctoral thesis on the history of municipal reform in France, and has recently published 'Le temps des maires. L'allongement du mandat en 1929: une redéfinition de l'espace politique municipal' (co-authored with Guillaume Marrel), in Politix, 14, 53 (2001).

Klaus Schwabe is Professor Emeritus of Contemporary History (Jean Monnet Chair) at the R.WTH-Aachen. His many publications include Woodrow Wilson, Revolutionary Germany and Peacemaking 1918–1919 (Durham, NC, 1985), Adenauer und die United States (Bonn, 1994) and (with Helmut König and Wolfgang Kuhlmann) Vertuschte Vergangenheit (Munich, 1997).

The following entries should have been included in the 'Notes on Contributors' of the previous issue.

Susanna Schrafstetter is a Lecturer in History at the University of Glamorgan, having taught previously at the University of Manchester. Her research interests include the Cold War, nuclear diplomacy and postwar British and German foreign policy. She is the author of Die dritte Atommacht. Britische Nichtverbreitungspolitik im Dienst von Statussicherung und Deutschlandpolitik 1952–1968 (Munich, 1999).

Stephen Twigge is an Honorary Research Fellow in the Department of Science and Technology Studies, University College London. He was formerly Lecturer in Contemporary History at Salford University and Research Associate in the Department of International Politics, University of Wales, Aberystwyth. He has written widely in the field of nuclear history and international relations and is the author (with Len Scott) of Planning Armageddon: Britain, the United States and the Command of Western Nuclear Forces 1945–1964 (Amsterdam, 2000).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777302003120 Published online by Cambridge University Press