NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Bruce J. Avolio, Ph.D., is the Mark Pigott Chair in Business Strategic Leadership, Executive Director, Center for Leadership & Strategic Thinking, Michael G. Foster School of Business, University of Washington. Bruce has an international reputation as a researcher and practitioner in leadership and was recently ranked in the top twenty-five management scholars going back over the last fifty years. He has consulted with public and private organizations in North and South America, Africa, Europe, and Southeast Asia. He has published eleven books and over 150 articles on leadership and related areas. Dr. Avolio's latest interest and presentations focus on the following: How do we accelerate authentic leadership development?; How do we use the positive psychological capacities of leaders to accelerate change?; and How do we show decision makers the 'return on development' investment in leadership? E-mail: bavolio@uw.edu.

Ante Glavas is an assistant professor of management at the University of Notre Dame. He studies employee values, motivation, and meaning at work when employees feel that their work contributes to improving the well-being of others and the environment. He received his Ph.D. in organizational behavior from Case Western Reserve University, where he was also the executive director of their social responsibility center and co-developed a signature sustainable enterprise course, which was recognized by Forbes as one of the ten most innovative business courses in the U.S. Prior to his Ph.D., he was a senior manager in Diageo (a Fortune 500 company), founded the first private business school in Croatia, founded two social enterprises, consulted to over one hundred organizations, conducted work in almost sixty countries, and served on the board of numerous non-profits. His work has been cited in numerous outlets such as CBS, CNN, Fast Company, Fortune, GreenBiz, and USA Today. He received numerous awards for his social work, among which was the Medal of Honor from the president of Croatia. He was also the runner up for the 2013 ONE Emerging Scholars Award from the Academy of Management and received the 2012 James Dincolo Outstanding Teaching Award for Management. E-mail: aglavas@nd.edu.

Sean T. Hannah is a professor of management and the Tylee Wilson Chair of Business Ethics at Wake Forest University School of Business. He focuses on the study of exemplary leadership and the development of competence and character in leaders and followers. He received his Ph.D. in management from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He has published over sixty papers on leadership, with articles in premier journals including the Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Journal of Applied Psychology, Personnel Psychology, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, Journal of Organizational Behavior, and Leadership Quarterly. He is a retired U.S. Army Colonel with twenty-six years of peacetime and combat service. E-mail: hannahst@wfu.edu.

©2014 Business Ethics Quarterly 24:2 (April 2014); ISSN 1052-150X pp. 295–298
DOI: 10.5840/beq201424211

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424211 Published online by Cambridge University Press

KEN KELLEY is the Viola D. Hank Associate Professor of Management in the Mendoza College of Business at the University of Notre Dame. Professor Kelley's work is on quantitative methodology, where he focuses on the development, improvement, and evaluation of statistical methods. Professor Kelley's specialties are in the areas of research design, longitudinal data analysis, effect size estimation and confidence interval formation, and statistical computing. Before joining the University of Notre Dame to teach MBA and undergraduate business statistics, Professor Kelley was an assistant professor in the inquiry methodology program at Indiana University–Bloomington. In addition to his methodological work, Professor Kelley collaborates widely on statistical and measurement issues with colleagues on a variety of important topics. Professor Kelley is an Accredited Professional Statistician (PStat) as recognized by the American Statistical Association and is the associate editor of Psychological Methods. E-mail: kkelley@nd.edu.

TAE WAN KIM is an assistant professor of ethics in the Tepper School of Business at Carnegie Mellon University. He earned his Ph.D. in ethics and law at the Ethics and Legal Studies Doctoral Program of the University of Pennsylvania in 2012. Two main themes of his work are developing a Confucian perspective on business ethics and exploring important moral issues in business by drawing upon and further developing Western ethical theory. Additionally, he seeks an interdisciplinary project to better understand relationships between ethics and management research, aiming to communicate with management research scholars. He has published in Business Ethics Quarterly and Journal of Business Ethics. E-mail: twkim@andrew.cmu.edu.

MICHAEL O'HARE is professor of public policy at the Goldman School of Public Policy, University of California at Berkeley. His teaching and research are mostly in arts and cultural policy, energy and environmental policy, higher education pedagogy, and public management. Trained as an architect and engineer at Harvard, he has had faculty appointments at MIT and Harvard, and non-academic positions at Arthur D. Little, Inc., the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. E-mail: ohare@berkeley.edu.

SAREH POURYOUSEFI is a research fellow at the International Centre for Corporate Social Responsibility (ICCSR) at the University of Nottingham. She received her Ph.D. in 2013 from the Department of Philosophy at the University of Toronto. Her current research involves drawing on an information theoretic framework to provide a novel minimalist analysis of professions, and exploring the implications of this analysis for debates about management professionalism. She also has a related interest in the normative foundations of economic theory, which is developed in two current projects, one on an interactive theory of agency ethics, and the other on an agency theoretic anatomy of consumer scams. Email: sareh.pouryousefi@nottingham.ac.uk.

S. PRAKASH SETHI is University Distinguished Professor of Management at the Zicklin School of Business, Baruch College, The City University of New York. He is also Forrest Mars, Sr. Visiting Professor of Ethics, Politics and Economics at Yale University, New Haven, Conn. Sethi enjoys international recognition as a pre-eminent researcher and scholar in the areas of corporate strategy, international business, globalization and sustainable business, development, environmental protection, corporate social responsibility and accountability, business ethics and human rights protection. and international codes of conduct. Sethi has done pioneering work in creating and implementing international corporate codes of conduct and global supply-chain management. For over the past twenty years, he has done extensive field work monitoring factories for sustainable business practices, human rights and environmental protection in developing countries around the world. His extensive field work in China was profiled in a lengthy article in the New York Times Sunday Magazine, December 23, 2007. He has published twenty-five books and over 135 articles in professional and scholarly journals. His writings have also appeared in major national and international news media including The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, and Bloomberg Business Week. He is also a frequent commentator in broadcast media in the U.S. and international outlets. E-mail: Prakash.sethi@baruch.cuny.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424211 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Matthew Sinnicks is a visiting lecturer in philosophy at the University of Hertfordshire. He was awarded his Ph.D. from Hertfordshire in 2012. His thesis sought to apply MacIntyre's ethical and social theory to contemporary work. Matthew has also taught at the Open University. His research interests include the morality of market economies, virtue ethics as it applies to organizations, the culture of management, and communitarian political theory. E-mail: m.i.sinnicks@herts.ac.uk.

Jason Stansbury is an assistant professor of business, and the James and Judith Chambery Fellow for the Study of Business Ethics, at Calvin College. He earned his Ph.D. in organization studies from Vanderbilt University. He serves on the editorial board of Business Ethics Quarterly, and his work has appeared in Business Ethics Quarterly, the Journal of Business Ethics, Research in the Sociology of Organizations, the Canadian Journal of Administrative Sciences, and the Oxford Handbook of Positive Organizational Scholarship. His research interests center upon religious ethics in organizations, moral imagination, and virtue. E-mail: Jason.stansbury@calvin.edu.

Jawad Syed is professor of organisational behaviour and diversity management at the Business School, University of Huddersfield, UK. His main academic interests include gender, race, and diversity in organisations, international HRM, and organisational knowledge. He has edited two books with Professor Mustafa Ozbilgin, Managing Cultural Diversity in Asia: A Research Companion (Edward Elgar, 2010) and Managing Gender Diversity in Asia: A Research Companion (Edward Elgar, 2010). He has also edited a text book, with Professor Robin Kramar, Human Resource Management in a Global Context: A Critical Approach (Palgrave Macmillan, 2012). E-mail: j.syed@hud.ac.uk.

Harry Van Buren is a professor of business and society at the University of New Mexico's Anderson School of Management. He received his doctorate from the

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424211 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Katz Graduate School of Business at the University of Pittsburgh. His main research interests are the ethical implications of contemporary employment practices, social capital theory, bullying within organizations, the human rights obligations of corporations, and the intersection of religious beliefs and business ethics. His research has been published in Academy of Management Review, Business & Society, Business Ethics Quarterly, Human Resource Management Review, Journal of Business Ethics, and Journal of Management Education, among others. He serves on the editorial board of Business & Society and currently serves as the program chair for the Social Issues Division of the Academy of Management. E-mail: hjvb3@unm.edu.

FRED O. WALUMBWA, Ph.D., is an associate professor of management and international business in the College of Business at the Florida International University. Fred's research interests include leadership and cross-cultural issues in management. E-mail: Fred.Walumbwa@asu.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424211 Published online by Cambridge University Press