Contributors to this Issue

NOEL D. CARY is Associate Professor of History at the College of the Holy Cross (Worcester, MA 01610; e-mail: ncary@holycross.edu). He is the author of The Path to Christian Democracy: German Catholics and the Party System from Windthorst to Adenauer (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1996). His article in this issue is part of a series of articles on détente and reunification. His newest project focuses on the Munich Olympics of 1972, during which the Israeli athletes were murdered. It is tentatively entitled "Divided Germany and Olympic Politics: Munich, Memory, and National Consciousness."

DAVID CREW is Professor of History at the University of Texas at Austin (Austin, TX, 78712–1163; e-mail: dfcrew@mail.utexas.edu. He has edited a reader on Nazism and German Society, 1933–1945 that was published by Routledge in 1994. His book, Germans on Welfare: From Weimar to Hitler, was published by Oxford University Press in 1998. He is now researching a book on "Memory Work: How Germans Have Dealt with Their Pasts, 1914–2000." His other research interests include the history of "mass culture" and consumerism in Germany and the history of sexual discourses and fantasies.

ANN GOLDBERG is an Assistant Professor of History at the University of California, Riverside (Riverside, CA 92521–0204; e-mail: ann.goldberg@ucr.edu). She is the author of Sex, Religion, and the Making of Modern Madness: The Eberbach Asylum and German Society, 1815–1849, published by Oxford University Press in 1999. She is currently working on the politics of asylum reform in Germany from 1871–1933.

WAYNE THORPE is Associate Professor of History at McMaster University (Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, L8S 4L9; e-mail: thorpew@mcmaster.ca). In 1995 he was appointed Research Fellow of the International Institute of Social History, Amsterdam. He is the author of "The Workers Themselves": Revolutionary Syndicalism and International Labour (Kluwer, 1989) and coeditor, with Marcel van der Linden, of Revolutionary Syndicalism: An International Perspective (Scolar, 1990). He is currently researching international contacts between antiwar trade unions in the First World War.

https://doi.org/10.1163/156916100746347 Published online by Cambridge University Press