Irish Historical Studies: Keith Jeffery Prize

Irish Historical Studies is delighted to announce that beginning in 2021, it will be awarding a prize for the best article submitted by an early-career researcher during the calendar year. The prize will be named after the former I.H.S. editor and chairman of the editorial board, the late Professor Keith Jeffery.

Conditions for entry:

- The author will be an early-career researcher, within five years (at the time of submission of the article) of the award of a Ph.D.;
- Entries will be restricted to particular areas of Irish history: in the first instance the prize will be awarded for an article on medieval Irish history (pre-*c.*1500);
- Articles entered for the prize will be sent for peer review in the normal way;
- Depending on the quality of submissions, the prize may not be awarded every year;
- The prize will consist of €500, plus the choice of €150-worth of C.U.P. books, to be chosen by the winner;
- Opening date: 1 January 2021; closing date: 31 December 2021;
- The winner will be notified by 1 March 2022;
- For submission details and rules for contributors, see: https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/irish-historical-studies/information/instructions-contributors
