Activities

Ian Shapiro, Yale University, elected to the American Philosophical Society.

Administrative Appointments

Yvette M. Alex-Assensoh, dean, Office for Women's Affairs, Indiana University Bloomington.

William Blomquist, dean, School of Liberal Arts, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis.

Ann N. Crigler, chair, department of political science, University of Southern California.

Richard H. Dekmejian, director, USC Institute of Armenian Studies, University of Southern California.

Edmond Keller, chair, department of political science, University of California, Los Angeles.

Mark Kessler, professor and chair, department of history and government, Texas Woman's University.

Devin T. Hagerty, chair, department of political science, University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

Stacia Haynie, vice provost for academic and planning, department of political science, Louisiana State University.

Patricia A. Hurley, interim associate dean of liberal arts, Texas A&M.

Forrest Maltzman, chair, department of political science, George Washington University.

Cecilia G. Manrique, chair, department of political science and public administration, University of Wisconsin–La Crosse.

Joseph Melusky, dean of the faculty and vice president for academic affairs, Lebanon Valley College.

Leonard Ray, 2008 director of international studies, department of political science, Louisiana State University.

James R. Rogers, interim head, department of political science, Texas A&M University.

Stanley Rosen, director, East Asian Studies Center, University of Southern California.

Paul Teske, dean, School of Public Affairs, University of Colorado Denver.

New Appointments

Philip Arena, assistant professor, department of political science, University at Buffalo.

Ivan Ascher, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Maryann Barakso, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Lisa Garcia Bedolla, associate professor, social and cultural studies, University of California, Berkeley.

Elizabeth Ben-Ishai, assistant professor, department of political science, Albion College.

Angelica Bernal, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Christopher Blattman, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

John Bullock, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Charli Carpenter, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Niambi Carter, assistant professor, department of political studies, Purdue University.

Rebecca S. Curry, assistant professor, department of political science, Hofstra University.

Timothy M. Dale, assistant professor, department of social change and development and political science program, University of Wisconsin–Green Bay.

Dinissa Duvanova, assistant professor, department of political science, University at Buffalo.

Colin Elman, associate professor, department of political science, Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

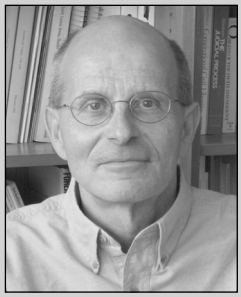

Miriam Fendius Elman, associate professor, department of political science, Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

Federico Ferrara, assistant professor, department of political science, National University of Singapore.

Erik Godwin, assistant professor, department of political science, Texas A&M University.

Mary Ellen Guy, professor, School of Public Affairs, University of Colorado Denver.

FOR THE RECORD

Lee Sigelman, The George Washington University, received the 2008 Walter Beach Pi Sigma Alpha Award from the National Capital Area Political Science Association. The award recognizes a political scientist who has made "a substantial contribution to strengthen the relationship between political science and public service."

Sigelman is the Columbian Professor of Political Science at George Washington University, a distinguished scholar and teacher, and a renowned editor. He is the author of some 270 peer-reviewed articles and five books. According to NCAPSA, "Advancing the interplay of scholarship and service requires understanding of how the systems of scholarship and policy work, and a deep commitment to institution building. Lee Sigelman really excels at this too, holding editorships of the American Political Science Review and American Politics Quarterly, the presidency of the Midwest Political Science Association, service on numerous editorial boards, frequent external review teams, and the NCAPSA Council, and a stint as NSF program officer."

He is also the recipient of the 2008 Oscar and Shoshana Trachtenberg prize for university service.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096508221293 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Ange-Marie Hancock, associate professor, department of political science, University of Southern California.

Min-Hua Haung, assistant professor, department of political science, Texas A&M University.

Dennis V. Hickey, James D. Morris Professor of Political Science, department of political science, Missouri State University.

Thor Hogan, assistant professor, department of politics, Earlham College.

Llewelyn Hughes, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Leigh Jenco, assistant professor, department of political science, National University of Singapore.

Jae Kwan Jung, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Sigrun Kahl, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Adria Lawrence, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Terence Lee, assistant professor, department of political science, National University of Singapore.

Quan Li, professor, department of political science, Texas A&M University.

Rahsaan Maxwell, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Elizabeth McNie, assistant professor, department of political studies, Purdue University.

Tamir Moustafa, associate professor and Jarislowsky Chair in religion and cultural change, School for International Studies, Simon Fraser University.

Harris Mylonas, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Jesse Rhodes, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Tatiana Rizova, assistant professor, department of government, Christopher Newport University.

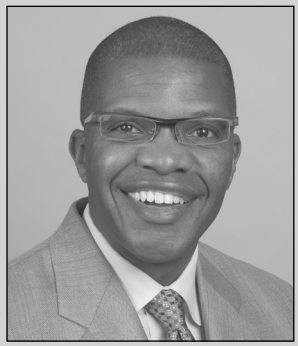

Sherri L. Wallace, associate professor, University of Louisville, has been appointed executive director of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists. NCOBPS was established in 1969 and celebrates its 40th Anniversary Meeting in March 2009. She has served APSA as co-chair of the Committee on the Status of Blacks in the Profession and as the 2008 program chair for the Teaching and Learning Conference, in addition to service to other regional organizations. Kathie Stromile Golden, the previous executive director, will remain as the president of the Graduate Assistantship Program, and as registered agent, managing the day-to-day financial matters for the organization.

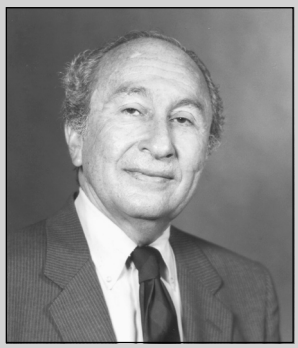

Photo: WZB, David Ausserhofer

Hans-Dieter Klingemann, professor of political science, Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin and Freie Universität Berlin, has been awarded the John G. Diefenbaker Award by the Canada Council for the Arts. Klingemann will spend a year at Simon Fraser University while examining the role of left-right orientation in political representation across nations and comparing and contrasting the Canadian experience, as a politically diverse and inclusive community in a multicultural setting, with the European challenges of identity and democratic legitimacy. Klingemann has served as president of the International Society of Political Psychology (1986–87)and the European Political Science Network (2002–05). Established in 1991, the John G. Diefenbaker Award is an annual award honoring the memory of former prime minister John G. Diefenbaker.

Marion Orr has been named director of the A. Alfred Taubman Center for Public Policy and American Institutions and director of the John Hazen White Public Opinion Laboratory at Brown University. Orr currently is the Fred Lippitt Professor of public policy, political science, and urban studies, and the director of the urban studies program at Brown University. He earned his Ph.D. in government and politics at the University of Maryland in 1992 and has taught at Brown since 1999. Orr co-authored book, The Color of School Reform: Race, Politics, and the Challenge of Urban Education, which won the American Political Science Association Urban Politics section's best book on urban politics award. He is also a former member of the APSA Executive Council

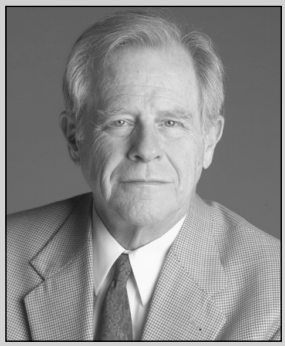

Max Kampelman was awarded the Democracy Service Medal by the National Endowment for Democracy. The medal recognizes individuals who have demonstrated, through personal commitment, their dedication to the advancement of freedom, human rights, and democracy. Kampelman was cited for his work as head of the U.S. delegation to the human rights Helsinki review conference and his role as chief negotiator in the nuclear arms control talks with the Soviet Union. He was APSA treasurer from 1956 to 1968, and was instrumental in helping APSA secure its building in Washington, D.C, which is one of its strong financial anchors today. He is the author of Entering New Worlds: The Memoirs of a Private Man in Public Life.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096508221293 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Robert Rohrschneider, a political science professor at Indiana University for the past 16 years, has been appointed the first Sir Robert Worcester Distinguished Professor in Public Opinion and Survey Research at the University of Kansas. Rohrschneider will join the KU faculty in academic year 2008–09, but will spend that year on a research fellowship at the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Studies before taking up his post at Lawrence. The distinguished professorship was established through a gift to KU by top British political commentator and survey research pioneer Sir Robert Worcester, founder of Market & Opinion Research International (MORI).

Theodore J. Lowi, John L. Senior Professor of American Institutions, Cornell University, has been conferred the honoris causa degree in political theory from the Council of the Political Science Faculty of the University of Pavia. This is an act that the faculty has reserved for a very small group of illustrious individuals who, through their work, have made fundamental contributions to the progress of the social and political sciences or, more in general, to the progress of society and government. Since its establishment in 1926, they have bestowed 12 laurae honoris causa upon scholars like Herbert A. Simon and Amartya Sen. Lowi is a former APSA president and is the author of The End of the Republican Era (1996).

Kathleen Staudt, professor and director of the Center for Civic Engagement, University of Texas, El Paso, won the University of Texas System's Innovations in Education Award. Through collaboration with more than 100 community partners in the El Paso region, Staudt has helped transform UTEP faculty members' teaching strategies and reshape students' learning experiences. In the past 10 years, the Center of Civic Engagement has contributed close to 300,000 hours of community service, giving students the opportunities to earn partial credit in programs such as tutoring adults in English as a Second Language courses and making presentations to middle and high school students on voting, pathways to college, and financial literacy.

Mitchel B. Wallerstein, dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University, has been appointed to Public Agenda's board of directors. He has been the dean of the Maxwell School and professor of political science and public administration since July 2003. Before joining Maxwell, Wallerstein was vice president of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation where he directed the foundation's international grant-making division, known as the Program on Global Security and Sustainability. Wallerstein serves on an advisory panel to the comptroller-general of the United States, and he is an elected fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Jun Saito, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Frederic Schaffer, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Brian Schaffner, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Jennifer Seely, assistant professor, department of politics, Earlham College.

Stuart Shulman, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Danielle Vogenbeck Varda, assistant professor, School of Public Affairs, University of Colorado Denver.

Antonio Vázquez-Arroyo, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Chris Weible, assistant professor, School of Public Affairs, University of Colorado Denver.

Nicholas Weller, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Southern California.

Karen Winzoski, assistant professor, department of political science, National University of Singapore.

Promotions

Jeb Barnes, associate professor, department of political science, University of Southern California.

Brenda Bushouse, associate professor with tenure, department of political science and public policy, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Teri Caraway, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Kathleen Collins, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Keith Darden, associate professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Bryan Garsten, associate professor, department of political science, Yale University.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096508221293 Published online by Cambridge University Press