Notes on Contributors

Barry Eichengreen is George C. Pardee and Helen N. Pardee Professor of Economics and Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley, and Research Associate, National Bureau of Economic Research. He is the author of many articles and books, amongst the most recent of which are Golden Fetters: The Gold Standard and the Great Depression (1992), Globalizing Capital: A History of the International Monetary System (1996), European Monetary Unification (1997) and Toward a New International Financial Architecture: A Practical Post-Asia Agenda (1999).

Peter Temin is Elisha Gray II Professor of Economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Research Associate, National Bureau of Economic Research. He is the author of many articles and books, amongst the most recent of which are Lessons from the Great Depression (1989) and The European Economy Between the Wars, with Charles Feinstein and Gianni Toniolo (1997); he is also the editor of Engines of Enterprise: An Economic History of New England (2000) and co-editor (with Elise Brezis) of Elites, Minorities and Economic Growth (2000).

Gaynor Johnson has recently completed a Ph.D. thesis on Anglo-German relations in the 1920s. She has published an article on Lord Curzon's relationship with Lloyd George in 1919–1922 in Diplomacy and Statecraft and is working on Lord Balfour's career as British Foreign Secretary.

Hubert Zimmermann is Lecturer in International Politics at the Ruhr-Universität Bochum, Germany. Author of Money and Security: Troops and Monetary Policy in Germany's Relations with the United States and Britain, 1955–71 (2000), he has also published on Germany and European integration and on West German–US security and monetary policy in the 1960s.

Bernard Bruneteau is maître de conférences at the Université Pierre Mendès-France Grenoble II as well as a member of the Centre d'Etudes et de Recherches Autour de la Démocratie (CERAD, Université de Rennes I). Author of Les paysans dans l'Etat: Le gaullisme et le syndicalisme agricole sous la V^e^ République (1994), Histoire de

Contemporary European History, 9, 2 (2000), pp. 325–326 © 2000 Cambridge University Press
Printed in the United Kingdom

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777300002113 Published online by Cambridge University Press

l'unification européenne (1996) and Les Totalitarismes (1999), he is currently working on the European idea in France between 1940 and 1944.

Megan Koreman was formerly Associate Professor of History at Texas Tech University and is the author of The Expectation of Justice: France 1944–1946 (1999) and various articles including 'The Collaborator's Penance: The Local Purge 1944–45', Contemporary European History, Vol. 6, no. 2 (1997).

Ghia Nodia is a Professor of Sociology at the Tbilisi State University and Chairman of the Causasian Institute for Peace, Democracy and Development. He is the author of a number of articles, including 'Nationalism and Democracy' in Larry Diamond and Marc F. Plattner, eds., Nationalism, Ethnic Conflict and Democracy (1994); 'Nationalism and the Crisis of Liberalism', in Richard Caplan and John Feffer, eds., Europe's New Nationalism: States and Minorities in Conflict (1996); 'Trying to Build (Democratic) State Institutions in Independent Georgia', in Gerhard Mangott, Hrsg., Brennpunkt Südkaukasus: Aufbruch trotz Krieg, Vertreibung und Willkürherschaft (1999); and 'The End of Revolution?', Journal of Democracy, no. 1 (2000). His current research project is the impact of the world polity on new democracies.

Bernard Voutat is assistant lecturer in the Department of Political Science at the University of Lausanne, Switzerland. He is particularly interested in the epistemology of political sociology, social relationships between the sexes and the construction of national identity. His publications include 'La construction des identités territoriales comme enjeu de lutte politique', in Heinz-Gerhard Haupt, Michael G. Müller and Stuart Woolf, eds., Regional and National Identities in Europe in the XIXth and XXth centuries (1998), 287–309.

Christian Montès is maître de conférences in the Department of Geography, Université Lyon 2, France. He has published on transport and land-use planning and on French and international regional planning. His current research interests are urban and regional planning in France, Great Britain and the United States.

Sabine Wichert is Senior Lecturer in Modern History at The Queen's University, Belfast and the author of Northern Ireland Since 1945 (2nd edn, 1999). Her research interests are Northern Ireland, and German foreign policy from the Second to the Third Reich.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777300002113 Published online by Cambridge University Press