Nominating Committee Offers Slate for 2004–2005 Officers and Council Members

The Association's 2004 Nominating Committee convened at the national office and agreed upon the following slate of officers and Council members. Members of the Association will have an opportunity to meet the nominees at the 2004 Annual Meeting in Chicago. Elections will be held at the Business Meeting. The Annual Meeting Final Program will have the room location for each event.

Serving on the 2004 Nominating Committee were Margaret Keck (chair), Johns Hopkins University; Frank Baumgartner, Pennsylvania State University; Stephen Holmes, New York University; Edmond Keller, University of California-Los Angeles; Valerie Martinez-Ebers, Texas Christian University; and Richard Snyder, University of Illinois-Urbana-Champaign.

President-Elect 2004–2005

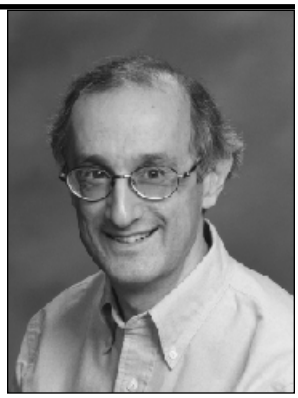

Ira Katznelson, Columbia University

Ira Katznelson is Ruggles Professor of Political Science and History at Columbia University, where he received his B.A. in 1966 and first taught after completing his Ph.D. in History at Cambridge University in 1969. Before returning to Columbia in 1994, he was a member of the departments of political science at the University of Chicago (where he was chair) and the New School for Social Research (where he was dean of the graduate faculty). In the 2003–2004 academic year, he has been acting vice president for arts and sciences and dean of the faculty at Columbia University.

His scholarship at the boundary of political science and history on the liberal state, race, cities, inequality, social knowledge, and institutions primarily has been concerned with the United States, but is indebted, and seeks to contribute to, the discipline's other subfields. Katznelson has recently finished When Affirmative Action Was White (forthcoming, Norton Publishers 2005), and is completing a collection of essays on modern social knowledge and a volume on the role of the South in shaping the New Deal. His other books include Black Men, White Cities (Oxford University Press, 1973), City Trenches (Pantheon Books, 1981), Schooling for All (with Margaret Weir, Basic Books, 1985), Marxism and the City (Oxford University Press, 1992), Liberalism's Crooked Circle (Princeton University Press, 1996), which won the Michael Harrington and Lionel Trilling Book Awards, and Desolation and Enlightenment: Political Knowledge after Total War, Totalitarianism, and the Holocaust (Columbia University Press, 2003). He also has co-edited Working Class Formation (with Aristide Zolberg, Princeton University Press, 1986), Paths of Emancipation: Jews, States, and Citizenship (with Pierre Birnbaum, Princeton University Press, 1995), and Shaped by War and Trade: International Influences on American Political Development (with Martin Shefter, Princeton University Press, 2002).

In 1970, he was the founding editor of Politics and Society, on whose editorial board he continues to serve. With Martin Shefter and Theda Skocpol, he has edited "Princeton Studies in American Politics: Historical, International, and Comparative Perspectives." With Helen Milner, he co-chaired the APSA 2000 Program Committee and edited Political Science: The State of the Discipline, Centennial Edition (Norton Publishers, 2002). He has also served as president of the Politics and History Section of APSA, president of the Social Science History Association, and chair of the Russell Sage Foundation Board of Trustees. He has been a Guggenheim Fellow, and is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of the American Philosophical Society.

Vice President 2004–2005

Robert Axelrod, University of Michigan

Robert Axelrod is the Arthur W. Bromage Distinguished University Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at the University of Michigan. He has appointments in the department of political science and the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy. Prior to coming to Michigan he taught at the University of California, Berkeley (1968–1974). He holds a B.A. in mathematics from the University of Chicago (1964), and a Ph.D. in political science from Yale (1969).

He is best known for his interdisciplinary work on the evolution of cooperation that has been cited in over three thousand articles. His current research interests include complexity theory (especially agent-based modeling) and international security. Axelrod has been elected to the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the Council on Foreign Relations. Among his honors are a five-year MacArthur Prize Fellowship, the Newcomb Cleveland Prize of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences for an outstanding contribution to science, and the National Academy of Sciences Award for Behavioral Research Relevant to the Prevention of Nuclear War.

Recently, Axelrod has consulted and lectured on promoting cooperation and harnessing complexity for the United Nations, the World Bank, the U.S. Department of Defense, and various organizations serving health care professionals, business leaders, and K–12 educators.

Axelrod's service contributions to APSA include service as Secretary of the Association, member of the Nominating Committee, and chair of the APSA panel on the Perestroika debate.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Vice President 2004–2005

Joan Tronto, Hunter College and CUNY

Joan C. Tronto received her A.B. at Oberlin College in 1974 and her Ph.D. at Princeton University in 1981. She has held visiting appointments at Yale University, the University of Humanist Studies, the Netherlands, and at Goethe University in Frankfurt-am-Main. She has been a fellow at the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna and at the University Center for Human Values at Princeton.

Tronto has authored numerous articles and Moral Boundaries: A Political Argument for an Ethic of Care (1993). She is the co-editor, with Cathy Cohen and Kathy Jones, of Women Transforming Politics: An Alternative Reader (1997).

Among her professional activities, Tronto has served as the book review editor for Polity (2000–2004) and on the editorial boards of Contemporary Political Theory (1999–), Acta Politica (1999–), Women and Politics (2000–2003), and International Feminist Journal of Politics (1999–).

In 1997–1999, she served on the APSA Council and the Administrative Committee. She served as a member of the Strategic Planning Committee in 2000 that recommended the creation of Perspectives on Politics. In 1993–1994, she served as chair for the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Caucus. She has served various roles in the Women's Caucus and in the Organized Section for Women and Politics, and in the Organized Section for Foundations in Political Theory. She also organized the section on "Gender and Politics" at the MPSA in 1997 and served on the MPSA Council, 2001–2003. She chaired the Leo Strauss Prize Committee in 1997 and the Foundations for Political Thought's First Book Prize Committee in 1995.

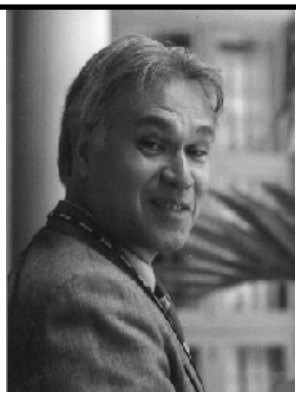

Tronto presented at the "Frontiers in Research" MiniCourse organized by the Women and Politics Section, 2000, and at the "Workshop on Women of Color and Political Science Research" held in conjunction with the 2002 APSA meeting. Tronto has also co-coordinated faculty development seminars at the City University of New York, for a seminar on "Balancing the Curriculum for Race, Class and Gender" and on "Considering Care."

Tronto received Hunter College's Faculty Award for Teaching Excellence in 1991, and served as the founding director of the College's Teaching Learning Center from 2001–2003. Tronto is currently chair of the Hunter College Senate.

She would welcome the opportunity to continue to make political science a more inclusive discipline committed to intellectual and academic pluralism. She also hopes to represent in the APSA the concerns of faculty who work in underfunded public universities.

Vice President 2004–2005

John Garcia, University of Arizona

John A. Garcia is professor of political science in the department of political science at the University of Arizona. He has been a member of the faculty since 1972, having served as department head from 1988–1993 and 1995–1996. He also served as acting director of the Mexican American Studies and Research Center in 1996–1996. Garcia received his B.A. from the University of Texas, Austin (1966), M.A. from the University of Houston (1968), and Ph.D. from Florida State University (1971).

Garcia is an Americanist, focusing on minority and urban politics with specific public policy areas (i.e., immigration, labor markets, education, and health). Much of his research efforts have concentrated upon the Mexican origin community, and other Latino groups, in relation to political community, mobilization and participation, political behaviors, and local politics. His work has appeared in Social Science Quarterly, National Journal of Political Science, Publius, International Migration Review, and other refereed journals, as well as many chapters in edited volumes. His most recent book, Latino Politics: Community, Culture and Interests, was released for publication by Rowman and Littlefield Press in May, 2003.

His professional involvement in the discipline is extensive. For APSA, he has served on the executive council; Program Committee Co-Chair for the 1999 Annual Meeting; section chair of Public Opinion and Elections; Ralph Bunche Award Committee; Best Dissertation in State and Local Politics Award Committee; member of the Chicano/Latino status committee; APSA task force member on minority programs; Urban Politics Best Book Award Committee; and APSA secretary (2001–2002). In addition, he has served as a member of the executive council of the Inter-University Consortium for Political Research and a member of the Advisory committee to the NSF Directorate for Social, Behavioral, and Economic Sciences.

Secretary 2004–2005

Christine Marie Sierra, University of New Mexico

Christine Marie Sierra is associate professor of political science at the University of New Mexico. She received a B.A. with honors from the University of Texas at Austin and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Stanford University. She previously taught at Colorado College and held a postdoctoral fellowship at the Brookings Institution. She has been a visiting professor at the University of Arizona and at the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers University.

She teaches and researches in American politics with a focus on race, ethnicity, and gender. She publishes on Latino political participation, immigration politics, and Hispanic politics in New Mexico. She has been at the forefront in the study of Latina women in the United States. Publications include Chicana Voices: Intersections of Class, Race,

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

and Gender (University of New Mexico Press, third printing, 1993) and articles in the National Political Science Review and Intercambios Femeniles (Stanford University). She also wrote and produced a highly acclaimed documentary, This Town Is Not For Sale! (1999) on the election of a Chicana activist as the first woman mayor of Santa Fe. She is currently directing a major study of African American, Latino/a, and Asian American elected officials, with a special focus on women of color. Collaborators on the three-year project include Carol Hardy-Fanta (University of Massachusetts-Boston), Pei-te Lien (University of Utah), and Dianne Pinderhughes (University of Illinois-Urbana).

She was a consultant in the establishment of a Latino Studies program at Williams College and the University of Notre Dame. From 1994 to 1997, she served as a presidential appointee to the Good Neighbor Environmental Board to address environmental and infrastructure needs of the U.S.-Mexico border region.

Service in the profession includes membership on the APSA Executive Council (2000–2002) and the Editorial Board of PS (1999–2001). A founding member of the APSA Organized Section on Race, Ethnicity, and Politics, she served as co-president (1999–2000) and on the book awards committee (1999). Additional service in APSA includes the Committee on the Status of Latinas/os in the Profession (1996–1998), the Women's Caucus for Political Science, and the Ralph Bunche Award for Best Book on Cultural Pluralism (1996).

She has numerous appearances on radio and television as an expert in American and Latino/a politics and has lectured extensively on college campuses across the country. In 2000 and 2002, she served as election night analyst and commentator for the NBC affiliate in Albuquerque.

President 2004–2005

Margaret Levi, University of Washington

Margaret Levi is the Jere L. Bacharach Professor of Political Science and International Studies at the University of Washington, Seattle. She was formerly the Harry Bridges Chair and director of the Center for Labor Studies. Levi earned her B.A. from Bryn Mawr College in 1968 and her Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1974, the year she joined the faculty of the University of Washington.

Levi has authored three books, including Of Rule and Revenue (University of California Press, 1988) and Consent, Dissent, and Patriotism (Cambridge University Press, 1997), and has co-edited five others. She is the joint author of Analytic Narratives (Princeton University Press, 1998). In progress is a coauthored volume with Karen Cook and Russell Hardin, building on a multi-year Russell Sage Foundation project on trust and trustworthiness. Concurrently, she is working on a range of issues having to do with labor unions and with global justice campaigns. Some of the work builds on the WTO History Project <www.wtohistory.org>, which she co-directed, and some derives from joint research with David Olson on union democracy. She also continues to write on issues concerning the analytic narrative approach to the study of complex historical and comparative processes.

Previous APSA responsibilities include serving as vice-president, president of the Organized Section on Political Economy, as Annual Meeting Program cochair with James Alt, on the Executive Council, and on the Civic Education Task Force. In 1999, she became the general editor of Cambridge Studies in Comparative Politics. She also is on the editorial boards of Politics & Society, the Annual Review of Political Science, Rationality and Society, and Political Studies. She has served on the board of the ICPSR and currently is on the boards of the Society for Comparative Research and of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences.

Levi maintains numerous community commitments. She serves on the Jobs for Justice workers' rights board. She was a member of the first coordinating committee of SAWSJ (Scholars, Artists, and Writers for Social Justice). With her husband, Robert D. Kaplan, she has developed a substantial collection of Australian aboriginal art, part of which is on loan to the Seattle Art Museum.

Her awards include the S. Sterling Munro Public Service Teaching Award in 2001. She was a fellow of the Center for Advanced Studies in the Behavioral Sciences in 1993–1994 and a John Simon Guggenheim Fellow, 2002–2003. She was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2001. She has lectured and been a visiting fellow at the Australian National University, the European University Institute, the Max Planck Institute in Cologne, the Juan March Institute, the Budapest Collegium, Cardiff University, and Oxford University.

Levi has two strong professional commitments. The first is to the building of communities of scholars who take on significant social science questions by bridging sub-disciplines, disciplines, and theoretical approaches. The second is to improving our capacity to address important political and policy issues in the classroom and with the public.

Treasurer 2004–2006

Henry Brady, University of California, Berkeley

Henry Brady is the Class of 1941 Monroe Deutsch Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at the University of California, Berkeley with appointments in the department of political science and the Goldman school of Public Policy. His scholarly interests include electoral politics and political participation, social welfare policy, political polling and policy-oriented surveys, statistical methodology, and the use of computers in management of social programs.

Brady has worked for the federal Office of Management and Budget and other organizations in Washington, D.C. Brady is the principal investigator for the California Work Pays Demonstration Project, which is developing and archiving public databases on California's welfare program. He is past president of the Political Methodology Group of the American Political Science Association, 2003 Annual Meeting Co-Chair, associate editor of Perspectives on Politics, and director of the University of California Data Archive and Technical Assistance Program, which provides academic researchers, state agencies, and others with technical assistance on computerized data including the census and sample surveys. He is co-author, with Sidney Verba and Kay Schlozman, of Voice and Equality: Civic Voluntarism in American Politics (Harvard University Press, 1995), editor of Rethinking Social Inquiry: Diverse Tools Shared Standards (Roman and Littlefield, September 2004), and has written on political participation and elections in America, Canada, Estonia, and Russia.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Council 2004–2006

Lisa Anderson, Columbia University

Lisa Anderson is professor of political science and, since 1997, dean of the School of International and Public Affairs at Columbia University. She has taught at Columbia since 1986, serving as director of the Middle East Institute (1990–1993) and chair of the Political Science department (1993–1997). Before coming to Columbia, she taught in the Government and Social Studies Departments at Harvard University. She received her B.A. from Sarah Lawrence College, an M.A.L.D. from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University, and both a certificate in Middle East studies and Ph.D. in political science from Columbia.

In addition to managing a school of over 1,000 public policy masters' and doctoral students from over 100 different countries, Anderson retains an active research portfolio. Her research interests lie at the convergence of international relations and comparative politics, particularly as they illuminate politics in the Middle East and North Africa, and at the intersection of scholarship and public policy around the world. She is working on a book on the fortunes of liberalism in the Middle East as well as developing several projects reflecting on both the rapid globalization of social science and the changing audiences for social science research at the beginning of the twenty-first century. Her most recent book is Pursuing Truth, Exercising Power: Social Science and Public Policy in the Twenty-first Century (2003). Her other publications include the edited volume, Transitions to Democracy (1999); the co-edited volume, Origins of Arab Nationalism (with Rashid Khalidi and others, 1991); The State and Social Transformation in Tunisia and Libya, 1830–1980 (1986), and numerous articles, many book chapters and much newspaper commentary.

She has served on the selection committee of APSA's Gabriel Almond Award in Comparative Politics, on the editorial committees of Comparative Politics and Ethics and International Affairs, and as a member of the Committee on Studies, Council on Foreign Relations. In 2001 she was elected president of the Middle East Studies Association of North America and served her term in 2003. She is currently chair of the board of directors of the Social Science Research Council and member of the boards of directors of the Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs and of Human Rights Watch. In 2002 she was awarded an honorary doctorate by Monmouth University.

Council 2004–2006

Andrew Aoki, Augsburg College

Andrew L. Aoki is associate professor and chair of the political science department, and also a member of the urban studies program at Augsburg College (Minneapolis). He received his B.A. from the University of Oregon, and M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

His current research focuses on the politics of immigration. He is working with three colleagues on a manuscript which examines the ways that the new immigration is transforming American racial politics, and also on an Asian American politics textbook. He has published works on Asian American politics, immigration, and multiculturalism, and is a co-editor of the Encyclopedia of Minorities in American Politics.

He is currently co-president of the APSA organized section on Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (REP), and has served as the REP co-program chair, and on the REP best book committee. He was a co-founder and one of the initial co-chairs of the Asian Pacific American Caucus (APAC), an APSA related group, and is currently the APAC electronic discussion list moderator. He is also currently a member of the APSA Committee on the Status of Asian Pacific Americans in the Profession.

As a council member, his interests would include seeing that APSA continues its efforts to respond to the full range of its diverse membership, including faculty at small teaching schools, who often seem to exist on the margins of APSA.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Council 2004–2006

Pradeep Chhibber, University of California, Berkeley

Pradeep Chhibber is associate professor of political science and the Indo-American Community Chair in India Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. Prior to coming to Berkeley, Pradeep taught at Ohio State University and the University of Michigan. He has a B.A. in economics and M. Phil. in political science from the University of Delhi and a Ph.D. in political science from UCLA in 1991. He is currently the chair of the political science department at Berkeley.

Pradeep's research centers on political parties and the politics of India. He is the author of The Formation of National Party Systems: Federalism and Party Competition in Canada, Great Britain, India and the United States (with Ken Kollman, forthcoming 2004, Princeton University Press) and Democracy without Associations: Transformation of the Party System and Social Cleavages in India (1999, University of Michigan Press) which was awarded the Leon Epstein Prize by the Political Parties and Organizations section of the APSA for 2000. His articles have appeared in a variety of area studies, development, economics, and political science journals.

Pradeep has been active in the profession, serving on the Political Organization and Parties Board and the executive committee of the Comparative Politics Section of the APSA.

Council 2004–2006

Neta Crawford, Brown University and University of Massachusetts, Amherst

I am an associate professor (research) of international studies at Brown University and associate professor of political science at the University of Massacusetts, Amherst. I am currently on the editorial board and executive committee of the American Political Science Review. I am also on the Committee on Slavery and Justice at Brown which seeks to examines the university's relationship to slavery and the slave trade.

My research interests include international relations theory, normative theory, foreign policy decisionmaking, African foreign and military policy, sanctions, peace movements, discourse ethics, research design, utopian science fiction, and emotion. I have a Ph.D. in political science from MIT and a bachelor of arts from Brown University. At Brown my independent concentration was "The War System and Alternatives to Militarism." I wrote my senior thesis on the genesis and effects of military rule in Ghana from 1960–1984.

I am the author recently of Argument and Change in World Politics: Ethics, Decolonization, Humanitarian Intervention (Cambridge University Press, 2002) which was a co-winner of the 2003 APSA International History and Politics section Jervis and Schroeder Award for best book. I am co-editor of How Sanctions Work: Lessons from South Africa (MacMillan, 1999). My articles have been published in books and journals such as International Organization, Security Studies, Perspectives on Politics, International Security, Ethics & International Affairs, Press/Politics, Africa Today and, most recently, Qualitative Methods.

I do some community and professional service related to my research interests. For example, I am a member of the advisory board of the Project on Defense Alternatives, based in Cambridge, MA. In 2000, I co-organized a research meeting in South Africa for the SSRC of young African and N. American scholars of security so that both sides could get to know each other, and hopefully stimulate each other's research. I have appeared on radio and TV and written op-eds on U.S. foreign policy and international relations for newspapers including the Boston Globe, Newsday (Long Island), The Christian Science Monitor, and the LA Times.

I became a political scientist because I am interested in making the world a better place. Of course, APSA is not the "world" but only a small part of it. I would view my participation in the council, if elected, as part of the larger ongoing effort to make APSA better—more inclusive, relevant, effective, and engaged in contemporary problems facing political scientists and the world.

Council 2004–2006

James Gibson, Washington University, St. Louis

James L. Gibson earned his B.A. in political science from Emory University in 1972 (with highest honors, and membership in Phi Beta Kappa), and his Ph.D. in 1975, from the University of Iowa. After teaching at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, and the University of Houston, Gibson became the Sidney W. Souers Professor of Government at Washington University in St. Louis in 1999.

Gibson became president of the Midwest Political Science Association in 1998 1999, has served on various APSA committees, and has been active in the Association's Centennial Campaign. He is also the recipient of several research awards, including the APSA's Burdette Pi Sigma Alpha Award and the Eulau Award, and awards from three Organized Sections: Political Organizations/Parties, Comparative Politics, and Law and Politics. The International Society of Political Psychology recently recognized his Overcoming Intolerance in South Africa (with Amanda Gouws) with the Alexander L. George Award for the best book published in political psychology. Gibson spent 2001 2002 as a visiting scholar at the Russell Sage Foundation.

Gibson has long been actively involved in the affairs of the National Science Foundation. He was a member of the first formal committee to call for a separate social sciences directorate, and then served on the Advisory Committee for the Directorate for Social, Behavioral and Economic Sciences from 1992 until 1998.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Gibson has published approximately 100 refereed articles. About one-third of these have appeared in the American Political Science Review, the American Journal of Political Science, or the Journal of Politics. He has also published five books, with his Overcoming Intolerance in South Africa: Experiments in Democratic Persuasion (with Amanda Gouws) published in 2003 (Cambridge University Press), and his Overcoming Apartheid: Can Truth Reconcile a Divided Nation? published in 2004 (Russell Sage Foundation).

Gibson has eclectic research interests, but his recent work focuses on mass psychology and behavior and democratization in the United States, Europe, and Africa. He is interested in understanding how and why ordinary people think the way they do about political issues (especially political tolerance and issues of justice) and how such thinking translates into public policy and democratic reform. In addition to his continuing research on democratization in Russia and truth, justice, and reconciliation in South Africa, Gibson is working on a new study of the problem of historical injustices and "land reconciliation" in South Africa, and is beginning a new project on public reactions to the Greensboro (North Carolina) Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

Council 2004–2006

Rogers Smith, University of Pennsylvania

Rogers M. Smith is the Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor and Chair of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania. He has been active in the Perestroika movement in political science in order to assist in the further development of a substantively rich, methodologically pluralist discipline and a fully representative, responsive American Political Science Association, served by officers selected through competitive elections.

Smith teaches American constitutional law and American political thought, with special interests in issues of citizenship and racial, gender, and class inequalities. He has published over 90 essays in academic journals, edited volumes and public interest publications, including the American Political Science Review, the Western Political Quarterly, Studies in American Political Development, Daedalus, Social Research, Yale Law Journal, the American Prospect, the Nation, and others. He is author or co-author of five books: Stories of Peoplehood: The Politics and Morals of Political Memberships (Cambridge University Press, 2003); The Unsteady March: The Rise and Decline of Racial Equality in America (with Philip A. Klinkner, 1999); Civic Ideals: Conflicting Visions of Citizenship in U.S. History (1997); Citizenship without Consent: The Illegal Alien in the American Polity (with Peter H. Schuck, 1985); and Liberalism and American Constitutional Law (1985, rev. ed.1990).

Civic Ideals received six "best book" awards from divisions of the American Political Science Association, the Organization of American Historians, the Social Science History Association, and the Association of American Publishers. It was also a Finalist for the 1998 Pulitzer Prize in History. The Unsteady March received the 2000 Horace Mann Bond Book Award of the W. E. B. Du Bois Institute, Harvard University.

Formerly the Alfred Cowles Professor of Government at Yale University, where he taught from 1980 to 2001, Smith also received a Yale College Prize for Distinguished Teaching in the Social Sciences in 1984. He received a Carnegie Corporation of New York "Scholar's Grant" in 2001–2003 to research a book to be entitled Civic Horizons: Achieving Democratic Citizenship in Modern America. He was a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar in 2002–2003 and was recently elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Council 2004–2006

Aili Tripp, University of Wisconsin, Madison

Aili Mari Tripp is associate dean of international studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, director of the Women's Studies Research Center, and professor of political science and women's studies. Tripp received her B.A. and M.A. from the University of Chicago and her Ph.D. from Northwestern University in 1990. She worked for two years as a program officer at the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation until 1992, when she joined the faculty at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Her publications include Changing the Rules: The Politics of Liberalization and the Urban Informal Economy in Tanzania (1997) and Women and Politics in Uganda (2000). The latter book was co-winner of APSA's 2001 Victoria Schuck Award and a 2001 Choice Outstanding Academic Titles Award. Tripp edited Sub-Saharan Africa: The Greenwood Encyclopedia of Women's Issues Worldwide (2003), and co-edited The Women's Movement in Uganda: History, Challenges and Prospects (2002), and What Went Right in Tanzania? People's Responses to Directed Development (1996). She has published many articles and book chapters on women and politics in Africa; societal responses to economic reform in Africa; and the political impact of transformations of associational life in Africa.

Tripp has won numerous awards, including grants from the Rockefeller Foundation, Social Science Research Council, American Council of Learned Societies, MacArthur Foundation, American Association of University Women, United Nations World Institute for Development Economics Research, the United States Information Agency, and the American Scandinavian Foundation.

She has served on the Executive Board of the African Studies Association and the Tanzanian Studies Association, on APSA's Gabriel A. Almond Award Committee, and is a member of the APSA Women's Caucus.

Tripp is co-editor of the University of Wisconsin Press series, Women in Africa and the Diaspora, and is member of several editorial boards, including Politics & Gender Journal, African Studies Quarterly, Africa Contemporary Record, and a Lynne Rienner book series, Challenge and Change in African Politics.

Having lived in Tanzania between 1960 and 1974, she returned to East Africa in 1987 and since that time has carried out extensive

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

fieldwork in Tanzania and Uganda on a regular basis. Her research has involved close and varied collaborations with African scholars. In her scholarship, she has sought to recognize those aspects of African realities that are part of global trends, identify those distinct to Africa, and bring African and global women's experiences more into the field of vision of political scientists in the U.S. Her homepage can be found at http://www.polisci.wisc.edu/~tripp.

Council 2004–2006

David Vogel, University of California, Berkeley

David Vogel is professor in the department of political science and the Haas School of Business at the University of California, Berkeley. He received his Ph.D. from the department of politics at Princeton University and has taught at Berkeley since 1973. Vogel's research focuses on business-government relations, business political activity, and government regulation. He has made contributions to the fields of American politics, comparative politics, and international political economy.

Vogel's books include Lobbying the Corporation: Citizen Challenges to Business Authority (Basic Books, 1978); National Styles of Regulation: Environmental Policy in Great Britain and the United States (Cornell, 1986); Fluctuating Fortunes: The Political Power of Business in America (Basic Books, 1989); Trading Up: Consumer and Environmental Regulation in a Global Economy (Harvard 1995); Kindred Strangers: The Uneasy Relationship Between Business and Politics in America (Princeton, 1996); and Benefits or Barriers? Regulation in Transatlantic Trade (Brookings, 1998). He is also co-editor (with Robert Kagan) of The Dynamics of Regulatory Change: How Globalization Affects National Regulatory Policies (UC Press, 2004). Vogel has also published more than 50 scholarly articles and essays.

He is currently working with Chris Ansell on an edited volume on food safety regulation in Europe as a case-study of contested governance, (MIT Press, forthcoming), and a monograph comparing changes in risk regulation in the United States and the European Union. Vogel is also writing a study of the potential and limitations of corporate social responsibility.

He has served on the editorial boards of the Journal of Policy History, Political Research Quarterly, Business and Politics, Business Ethics Quarterly, and the Journal of Public Affairs. Since 1982, he has edited the California Management Review.

Vogel has served on six award committees for the APSA and the History and Politics Section and as program co-chair for the History and Politics Section.

He has held the Jean Monnet Chair and the BP Chair in Transatlantic Relations at the European University Institute and been a visiting professor at INSEAD, Sciences Po, the Bren School of Environmental Management, and the Hebrew University.

Continuing Officers and Council:

Council 2003–2005

John Aldrich, Duke University

John H. Aldrich is the Pfizer-Pratt University Professor of Political Science at Duke University, and adjunct professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He previously taught at Michigan State University and the University of Minnesota, before moving to Duke in 1987. Aldrich received his Ph.D. from the University of Rochester in 1975. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and has been a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Studies in the Behavioral Sciences and at the Rockefeller Center, Bellagio.

Aldrich is the author of Before the Convention and Why Parties? (both published by the University of Chicago Press) and co-author with Paul Abramson and David Rohde of the election series, the most recently published of which is Change and Continuity in the 2000 and 2002 Elections (CQ Press), among other books. He is currently co-writing three book-length manuscripts, including one on political parties and the U.S. Congress with Rohde, one on party competition in the South with John Griffin, and one (with numerous co-authors) on economic globalization and democratic politics. He is also author of numerous articles and book chapters. He is the recipient or co-recipient of the Eulau, Kammerer, CQ Press, and Pi Sigma Alpha awards.

Aldrich has served as Secretary of this Association, chair of the Woodrow Wilson Book Award Committee, and as member and chair of this Association's Nominating Committee. He is past president of the Southern Political Science Association and is currently president-elect of the Midwest Political Science Association. He and John Sullivan edited the American Journal of Political Science.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Council 2003–2005

Manuel Avalos, Arizona State University, West

Manuel Avalos is associate professor of political science in the department of social and behavioral sciences, associate vice provost for research and faculty development, and associate director of the Hispanic Research Center at Arizona State University, West. He received his doctoral degree at the University of New Mexico and did postdoctoral work at the Center for Mexican American Studies at the University of Texas at Austin.

His current research focuses on questions of racial inequality in the Americas, and the political incorporation of the Latino electorate at the state, local, and national level. He is currently working on the completion of an analysis of the impact of the Latino vote on the 2000 Presidential election with special emphasis on Arizona and the impact of the 2000 political redistricting process on Latino political representation in Arizona. He teaches courses on American national government, quantitative research methods, Latino politics, race and politics, and on the ways in which science fiction literature impacts political futures.

His publications have appeared in Sociological Perspectives, Harvard Journal of Hispanic Policy, Policy Studies Journal, as well as articles in edited volumes by Roberto de Anda, Chicanas and Chicanos in Contemporary Society and in Rodolfo de la Garza and Louis DeSipio, eds. Ethnic Ironies and Awash in the Mainstream: Latino Politics in the 1996 Elections.

He is one of founding members of the APSA organized section on Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (REP) and has served as the section co-president, section co-program chair, moderator for the section list server (RACE-POL), on the REP best book awards committee, and is currently the chair of the best dissertation awards committee of REP. He has also served as co-chair of the Latino caucus within APSA, served on the APSA Committee on the Status of Latina/os in the Profession, and contributed to the proposal to establish the Latino Fund as part of the APSA centennial campaign. In 2001, he was awarded the first APSA Ada Sosa Riddell Award for the mentoring of undergraduate Latina/o students.

As a member of the council, he will work to insure that the needs and perspectives of relatively underrepresented voices will be considered in the decision-making apparatus of the APSA.

Council 2003–2005

Judith Baer, Texas A&M University

Judith A. Baer is professor of political science at Texas A&M University. Before coming to A&M in 1988, she taught at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, and the State University of New York at Albany. She received her Ph.D. in political science from the University of Chicago in 1974.

Baer specializes in public law and feminist jurisprudence. Her scholarship is guided by the principle that passionate commitment is compatible with dispassionate inquiry. Her books and articles include Our Lives before the Law: Constructing a Feminist Jurisprudence (Princeton, 1999), which received the Victoria Schuck Award from the APSA and honorable mention for the C. Herman Pritchett Award from the Organized Section in Law and Courts. She held a Fulbright lectureship at Bogazici University, Istanbul, Turkey in 1997–1998 and a fellowship at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, D.C. in 1995–1996. She is committed to writing for scholarly, student, and general audiences. The third edition of her undergraduate textbook, Women in American Law, was published in 2002.

Baer has been active in the political science profession. Most recently, she was president of the Women's Caucus for Political Science in 2002–2003. She served on the Council of the Southwestern Political Science Association, 1993–1995, as secretary-treasurer of the Organized Section on Law and Courts, 1993–1996, and as chair of the Edward S. Corwin Award Committee in 1997. She has been a member of the program committees of the American, Western, and Midwest Political Science Associations. She has served on the editorial board of Women and Politics for several years.

Baer is committed to pluralism and diversity in political science. She is eager to participate in discourse on proposed changes in APSA's election structure.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Council 2003–2005

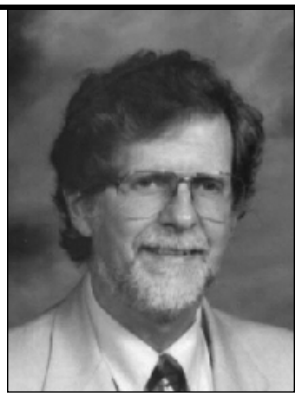

Shirley Geiger, Savannah State University

Shirley Geiger is an associate professor of public administration and political science at Savannah State University, where she has taught for the past seven years. Dr. Geiger formerly served as interim director of the MPA program and is currently coordinator of the University's Community Development Work Study Program grant that prepares graduate students for careers in community building. Before beginning her academic career in 1990, Dr. Geiger worked in housing and community development at the state, local, and federal levels. Prior to joining the SSU faculty, she taught at the University of South Carolina at Columbia, McMurray College (Abilene, TX), and Columbia College (Columbia, SC). She is a graduate of the University of South Carolina (Ph.D. and MPA) and Howard University (BA) and participated in a post-doctoral fellowship in public policy and minority communities at the Roy Wilkins Center for Social Justice at the Humphrey Institute, University of Minnesota. Additional training includes completion of an executive seminar on Budgeting and Finance in the Public Sector at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, and advanced leadership training seminars at the Center for Creative Leadership, Greensboro.

Dr. Geiger's research focuses on public budgetary decision making, women and public policy, non-traditional leaders, affirmative action, conflict resolution in the public sector, and housing and community development. Her work has appeared in Legislative Quarterly; Leadership Journal; PS; National Women's Studies Association Journal; and The Proceedings of the Tenth Annual Conference on Housing, and she recently co-edited a special issue of Politics and Policy.

As a member of the APSA Council, Dr. Geiger will bring her interest in issues of work and family for women in the academy, community-university linkages, and the continued importance of HBCU's in preparing the next generation of political scientists and public administrators.

Council 2003–2005

John Harbeson, CUNY, City College of New York

John W. Harbeson is professor of political science in the Graduate Center and at City College in the City University of New York, chairing the College department from 1999-2001. Prior to 1985, he was professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside. At both universities he has served as Director of International Studies. He received his B.A. from Swarthmore College, his M.A. from the University of Chicago, and his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Harbeson's research has centered on the comparative study of political change and the political economy of development in less developed countries, with a concentration on sub-Saharan Africa. His books include: The Ethiopian Transformation: The Quest for the Post-Imperial State, Nation Building in Kenya: The Role of Land Reform, Civil Society and the State in Africa (co-edited with Donald Rothchild and Naomi Chazan), *Africa in World Politics (*3rd. edition, co-edited with Donald Rothchild), The Military in African Politics (ed.), and Responsible Government: The Global Challenge (co-edited with Raymond Hopkins and David Smith). He has written over 70 articles and book chapters and an equal number of conference papers. His teaching interests include political theory and international relations as well as comparative politics.

He has been a Jennings Randolph Senior Fellow at the U.S. Institute of Peace and a Visiting Fellow of the Center of International Studies at Princeton University. While on leave from his academic positions, he twice served in the U.S. Agency for International Development, most recently as Regional Democracy and Governance Advisor for Eastern and Southern Africa. Harbeson received grants from the MacArthur Foundation and the American Council of Learned Societies. He has taught at the Universities of Addis Ababa, Ethiopia and Nairobi, Kenya and as a professorial lecturer at the Johns Hopkins University Paul Nitze School of Advanced International Studies. He chairs the editorial board for the Lynne Rienner series on Challenge and Change in Contemporary African Politics. Combining the study of politics with its practice, he was twice elected to the Board of Trustees (city council) of Croton-on-Hudson, NY, where he resides.

Within APSA, Harbeson is cofounder (with Cynthia McClintock) of the Comparative Democratization section and the section's current chair. He is also the founder and current chair of the African Politics Conference Group, a related group within APSA and a sponsored organization within the African Studies Association. A central objective of both groups has been to broaden the contributions to theory and to leading paradigms of comparative politics so as to be more inclusive of insights from research in all world regions, particularly historically marginalized, less developed country regions. He has been a member of APSA's Area Studies Liaison Group since its establishment.

John Harbeson is committed to methodological pluralism, to a market place of ideas and conceptual approaches, and to employing insights from the experience of all world regions in the quest for sound theory. He believes in, and seeks to advance, mutually fruitful dialogue between the academic and policymaking worlds.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Council 2003–2005

Marion Orr, Brown University

Marion Orr is professor of political science at Brown University. He previously was a member of the political science faculty at Duke University. He earned his B.A. degree in political science from Savannah State College, M.A. in political science from Atlanta University (now Clark-Atlanta University), and a Ph.D. in government and politics from the University of Maryland, College Park. He is affiliated with the Urban Studies Program and the A. Alfred Taubman Center for Public Policy and American Institutions at Brown University.

He is the author of two books, Black Social Capital: The Politics of School Reform in Baltimore (University Press of Kansas, 1999), which won the Policy Studies Organization's Aaron Wildavsky Award for the "best policy studies book published in 1999," and The Color of School Reform: Race, Politics and the Challenge of Urban Education (Princeton University Press, 1999), with Jeffrey Henig, Richard C. Hula, and Desiree Pedescleaux, which was named the best book in 1999 by the APSA's Urban Politics Section. His research is in the areas of American government and politics, urban politics, race and politics, urban public policy, and the politics of urban schools.

Orr is active in the profession. He is president-elect of the APSA Organized Section on Urban Politics, is a member of the Governing Board of the Urban Affairs Association, and serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Urban Affairs. In addition, he served on the APSA Ralph Bunche Book Award Committee (2002–2003), the APSA Strategic Planning Committee (1999–2000), the executive council of the APSA organized section on urban politics (1995–1997 & 1999–2001), the editorial board of Urban Affairs Review (1995–1998), and the executive council of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists (1995–1998).

Orr is currently gathering data for a study of the community organizing efforts of local affiliates of the Industrial Areas Foundation (IAF), a network of local, community-based organizations founded by the late Saul Alinsky.

Council 2003–2005

Joanna Vecchiarelli Scott, Eastern Michigan University

Joanna Vecchiarelli Scott has been professor of political science at Eastern Michigan University since January, 1990. She arrived at EMU as department head, recruited in a national search, and served in that capacity until May, 1995. Previously, she taught at California State University, Long Beach, where she served for three years on the General Education Governing Committee and was elected "Outstanding Teacher" in the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences. She served on the APSA Nominating Committee from 2000–2002 and on the Professional Ethics Committee. She is currently chair of the Leo Strauss Dissertation Award Committee. Scott is a member of the Western and Midwest regions, served on the Board of the Midwest, and is active in the national and Midwest regional Women's Caucus for Political Science. Her B.A. is from Barnard College, where she graduated cum laude with Honors in Government, her M.A. is from Columbia University where she was awarded a Presidential Fellowship, and her Ph.D. is from the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, UK. Scott is a political theorist and Europeanist interested in the cross-fertilization of European and American political culture in the 20th century, with a particular focus on Hannah Arendt and her generation of philosophers, social theorists, writers, and artists. She is also engaged in research on contemporary reinterpretations of medieval political theories of identity and power, from the Cold War to the post-Modern eras.

Scott published *Hannah Arendt: Love and Saint Augustine (*with Judith C. Stark, 1996, University of Chicago Press) and is completing a second study on Arendt which explores her emergence as an American political theorist and cultural critic in New York City in the middle decades of the 20th century. Scott's other publications include book chapters, book reviews, and articles in political science journals such as The Journal of Politics, Polity, PS, and The American Political Science Review, as well as in the multidisciplinary venues, Augustinian Studies, New German Critique, and the Hannah Arendt Newsletter. Scott's research has been funded by five NEH Summer Seminars and Institutes for College Teachers, an NEH Research Fellowship for College Teachers, and a Gilder Lehrman Research Fellowship for 2003–2004 to support archival research at Columbia University and the New York Public Library. In July, 1996, her article on Arendt and the 1960 Presidential election, "Hannah Arendt: Campaign Pundit," appeared in the New York Times as an Op-Ed.

The American journalist Randolph Bourne observed in 1916, "The whole point of an education is to know a revolution when you see one." Scott sees this comment as central to today's debates on methodological pluralism and representation in the American political science community. She is pleased to have participated on Nominating Committees which have recruited two outstanding women presidents and councils committed to open dialogue and constructive change. Having been both a faculty member and administrator, and fully committed to voicing the interests of women and scholars of color, public universities, and normative political theory in the profession, Scott will continue to speak and write about the disciplinary experience. Her past publications on this theme include, "Death by Inattention: The Strange Fate of Faculty Governance" (Academe, Nov.-Dec., 1997) and "The Strange Death of Faculty Governance" (PS: Political Science and Politics, Dec., 1996). Scott can be reached at jscott@emich.edu.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Chicago 2004

APSA celebrates its 100th Annual Meeting in 2004, returning to Chicago, site of the first Association gathering. Be sure to join us for this exciting meeting taking place September 2- 5, 2004, and headquartered at the Hilton Chicago and Palmer House Hilton hotels.

Program co-chairs Atul Kohli, Princeton University, and Anne Norton, University of Pennsylvania, along with representatives from 47 program divisions, have developed a rich program that explores the broad theme of "Global Inequalities," as well as the latest political science research in all fields. Attention to the theme will be drawn through 18 special theme panels addressing such topics as "The Evolution of Global Income Inequality" and "Global Cities, Local Inequalities." A handful of plenary sessions featuring addresses by George Soros, Mary Robinson, and Joseph Sitglitz provide broader commentary and perspective. These sessions renew political science's commitment to pursuing the causes and consequences of global inequalities, and to interrogating the relation of power to knowledge in their production and maintenance.

Over three and a half days nearly 700 sessions will be sponsored by APSA and related groups. Chicago 2004 promises something for all political scientists, whether participating on a panel, using the job service, making new contacts, or simply catching up with old friends. We'll see you in the Windy City.

A Fitting Location for 100th Meeting

On December 28, 1904, members of the American Political Science Association gathered for the opening session of the Association's first Annual Meeting. Held in Chicago at the invitation of the University of Chicago and Northwestern University, the event took place in coordination with the meetings of the American Historical and American Economic Associations.

Five sessions were held over the span of three days. The opening session, held jointly with AHA, featured APSA President Frank J. Goodnow's address. Goodnow introduced the work of the new Association and framed topics and fields of study in need of attention from political scientists.

Other sessions developed around topics such as International Law, Government of Colonies and Dependencies, and State and Local Government. In all, 13 papers were delivered. Among the authors were four future APSA presidents. While precise numbers on attendance are unable, the young Association already comprised 214 members in the first year. By the 1905 meeting, this number jumped to 308.

The Executive Council of the Association first met on December 29, 1904. Among its actions was the creation of the first "Sections," precursors to today's Organized Sections. In defining the Association, the founding members sought to do more than simply hold a meeting, but to develop an organization "that can take the scientific lead in all matters of political interest, encouraging research … and in general, advance the scientific study of politics in the U.S." From this lofty goal developed nine sections, with focuses on topics as distinct as Comparative Legislation, International Law and Diplomacy, and Instruction in Political Science.

It is only fitting that APSA return to Chicago for its 100th meeting. And while the event now features over 700 sessions and 6,000 attendees, the meeting will again feature the hospitality of the University of Chicago and Northwestern, as they graciously sponsor the Opening Reception on Thursday evening.

Gathering Spots. Mandel Hall on the University of Chicago campus (top) and the downtown Northwestern University Building(above) held sessions of the 1904 APSA meeting. Photos courtesy of the University of Chicago and Northwestern University.

NEW PANEL TIMESLOTS

Panels will be held at the Hilton Chicago and Palmer House Hilton. To accomodate the use of shuttle buses among the hotels, the 2004 Annual Meeting will feature modified panel times. As in 2003, panels will begin at 8:00 AM—45 minutes earlier than the traditional start time. The four time slots will follow this schedule: 8:00 to 9:45a.m.; 10:15 to 12:00 p.m.; 2:00 to 3:45p.m.; and 4:15 to 6:00p.m. Special programming will be scheduled during the 12:00 to 2:00pm time slot.

100th MEETING RECEPTION

In celebration of the APSA's 100th gathering, be sure to join us for a Chicago-inspired reception on Thursday evening. The event will take place from 9:30 to 11:30 pm, following Susanne Rudolph's presidential address, in the Grand Ballroom of the Hilton Chicago and will feature food, drink, and music with a Chicago flair. The event draws on the hospitality and goodwill of the Association's first annual meeting hosts—the University of Chicago and Northwestern University—and is sponsored by these two local instiutions.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Plenary Sessions and Special Events

Throughout the meeting a number of major speakers will take the stage to build on the theme of "Global Inequalities." The meeting also includes major award lectures and the annual presidential address. These events are open to all registrants and we encourage you to attend.

AN EVENING WITH GEORGE SOROS. Philanthropist and investor George Soros provides his unique perspective on globalization and growing economic inequalities. This special event, hosted by Lawrence Jacobs of the University of Minnesota, includes Theda Skocpol of Harvard University and Benjamin Barber of the University of Maryland as discussants. The session is sponsored by the APSA Task Force on Inequality and American Democracy. (Friday/7:00pm)

GLOBALIZATION AND HUMAN RIGHTS WITH MARY ROBINSON. A leading voice in the fight for global human rights, former President of Ireland and United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights Mary Robinson discusses initiatives to integrate concepts of human rights, gender sensitivity, and enhanced accountability into efforts to address global challenges and governance shortcomings. (Saturday/12:30pm)

DECADE OF BEHAVIOR LECTURE. Nobel Laurete economist Joseph Stiglitz of Columbia University provides an interdisciplinary perspective on the global economy and the failure of world-wide economic policies to consistently help developing countries. The Decade of Behavior Lecture is made possible by the Decade of Behavior Initiative which seeks to increase awareness about the importance of behavioral and social science research in addressing societal concerns and issues. (Friday/12:00pm)

NEW POLITICAL SCIENCE PLENARY. Former head of the voting rights project at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and 1993 nominee to head the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, Harvard Law Professor Lani Guinier addresses "Reconstructing Brown's Faded Legacy: A New Paradigm for Race, Class and Equality." With this year's fiftieth anniversary of Brown, discussion of the decision's impact on the American social landscape has seldom been more poignant. (Saturday/8:30pm)

Castells and Ingraham to Deliver Award Lectures

The 2004 Annual Meeting in Chicago will feature award addresses by two major scholars, sociologist Manuel Castells of the University of Southern California and Patricia Ingraham of Syracuse University.

Manuel Castells has been named winner of the 2004 Ithiel de Sola Pool Award and will deliver the fourth Pool Lecture on Friday, September 3, at 8:30pm. Viewed as one of the leading analysts of the current age, Castells' trilogy, The Information Age: Economy, Society, and Culture, has been compared to the work of Karl Marx and Max Weber. The book, reprinted in 18 languages, explores his concept of 'the network society,' which has influenced research across the social sciences. A prolific writer, with more than 20 titles to his name, he has published widely on technology and innovation.

Currently, Castells holds the Wallis Annenberg Chair in Communication Technology and Society at the Annenberg School for Communication, University of Southern California. He is also Research Professor at the Open University of Catalonia in Barcelona.

The Pool Award is given triennially to a scholar who explores the implications of research on issues of politics in a global society, evoking the broad range of scholarship pursued by Ithiel de Sola Pool. Previous recipients have included Robert Putnam and W. Lance Bennett.

Patricia Wallace Ingraham, Distinguished University Professor of Public Administration and Political Science at the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University, has been selected as the 2004 John Gaus Lecturer. She will deliver the 19th annual Gaus Lecture on Friday, September 3, at 6:00pm.

Ingraham is a leading contributor in the field of public administration. Her research explores issues of human resource management, administrative reform, and, most recently, the linking of management to performance in public organizations. She has authored or edited nine books on public management, including The Foundation of Merit and Government Performance: Why Management Matters.

At Syracuse she is a founding director of the Alan K. Campbell Public Affairs Institute and the first director of the Government Performance Project, a multi-year analysis of management capacity at the state, local, and federal levels.

Castells and Ingraham will be honored at the Association's Awards Ceremony on Thursday, September 2, at 12:00pm.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

AWARDS CEREMONY

Recognizing excellence in the profession is one APSA's most important activities. Continuing the tradition set in 2003, Program co-chairs Atul Kohli and Anne Norton will host the APSA Awards Luncheon and Ceremony. The event will take place from 12:00–2:00 pm on Thursday, September 2. Nineteen awards will be given in categories for dissertations, books, papers, articles, and career achievement. For the first time, the Frank J. Goodnow Award will also be presented at this event. The luncheon is a ticketed event, though the ceremony is open to all attendees. The event is made possible through the generous support of the Policy Studies Organization.

SPOTLIGHT - PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS

APSA President Susanne Hoeber Rudolph will deliver the 2004 Presidential Address on Thursday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the International Ballroom of the Hilton Chicago. Over the past 50 years, her research has transformed the study of politics within both political science and across disciplinary boundaries in the social sciences and humanities. Rudolph is the William Benton Distinguished Service Professor at the University of Chicago. All registrants are invited to attend the event, which will be followed by a reception.

APSA PROGRAM AT A GLANCE

Global Inequalities

Here's a quick overview of the schedule and major events for this year's Annual Meeting. Be sure to check out the Preliminary Program in this issue of PS or the online program to review all of the meeting's events.

NEW TIMES!	Wednesday September 1	Thursday September 2	Friday September 3	Saturday September 4	Sunday September 5
8:00–9:45 am		panel sessions	panel sessions	panel sessions	panel sessions
10:15am–12:00 pm		panel sessions	panel sessions	panel sessions	panel sessions
12:00–2:00 pm	Short Courses (9:00am–5:00pm)	Awards Ceremony (12:00–2:00pm)	Decade of Behavior Lecture Joseph Stiglitz (12:00–2:00pm)	Plenary Session Mary Robinson (12:30–2:00)
2:00–3:45 pm		panel sessions	panel sessions	panel sessions
4:15–6:00 pm		panel sessions	panel sessions	panel sessions
6:00–7:00 pm		Pi Sigma Alpha Lecture (6:00–7:00pm) TBA BUSINESS MEETINGS	Gaus Lecture 6:00–7:00pm Patricia Ingraham BUSINESS MEETINGS	APSA Business Meeting (6:15pm) BUSINESS MEETINGS
7:00–8:30 pm		RECEPTIONS	RECEPTION: Honoring Teaching APSA Plenary: George Soros	RECEPTIONS Graduate Student Reception
8:30–9:30 pm		Presidential Address 8:30–9:30	Pool Lecture Manuel Castells 8:30–9:30pm	Organized Section Plenary Sessions: Lani Guinier Human Rights Section (TBA)
10:00pm–12:00 am		100th Meeting Reception 9:30–11:30pm	NIGHTCAP RECEPTIONS	NIGHTCAP RECEPTIONS

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Highlights from the April 2004 Council Meeting

The APSA Council met April 17, 2004, at the Midwest Political Science Association's Annual Meeting in Chicago, Illinois. The following are highlights from the meeting:

- Council approved with one abstention the proposed 2005 budget and noted that it included the notion of a third meeting, which Council supported in principle. Council also voted unanimously to accept the unqualified audit for FY'03.

- Council voted unanimously to delegate Susanne Rudolph, Margaret Levi, and Henry Brady to work with APSA staff to move forward with efforts to buy the neighboring building pending development of comprehensive cost estimates and full Council approval.

- In support of the initiative to increase the public presence of political science, Council voted unanimously to encourage the Association's reallocation of staff time with appropriate training to write press releases and carry out other public affairs tasks. Executive Director Michael Brintnall responded that APSA staff will develop an operating plan for Council review.

- In reference to the Task Force on Inequality and American Democracy, Council voted unanimously to accept and disseminate the task force's report.

- Council heard a report from Kirstie McClure, chair of the Elections Review Committee, on the committee's assessment of APSA elections with suggestions/recommendations for Council review. Council commented on both substantive issues and the committee's mission and asked the committee to prepare a final report that the Council can receive in a manner analogous to the previous election review committee's report. Council unanimously approved posting on the web site the data collected on APSA membership and governance and the memo regarding elections systems that were included in the report.

- APSR Editor Lee Sigelman reported on the current state of the Review and Council applauded his renewal for two additional years. Council also supported his addition of a few more names to the APSR editorial board. During budget approval, Council authorized the hiring of an additional student editorial intern.

- Council unanimously approved incorporating a best article award for Perspectives into the Heinz Eulau Award. The amount for each award would be $750; APSA operating funds would make up deficiencies in funds generated by the endowment until a new endowment can be raised.

- Brintnall reported that a suggestion from Gary King and Greg Kasza on open-access journals will be referred to the publications committee. He also provided status reports on a project involving the Encyclopedia Society, a request to develop a taxonomy of political science, and the new web site for PROL, www.politicalscience.org.

- Chair of the Council Rules Committee Robert Axelrod outlined the By-laws changes aimed at clearing up and modernize items, such as the use of electronic mechanisms for voting, clarify that associate members are not voting members, and state Council guidance to the nominating committee. He also noted that additional By-laws changes relating to the Annual Meeting and educational programs are deferred until the fall meeting to allow further committee input. Council unanimously approved changes to the By-laws.

- Council heard a report from Kirsten Monroe about the progress of the Mentoring Task Force.

- Council voted unanimously to accept the report developed by the Task Force on Graduate Education and directed staff to devise an implementation strategy, including publication on the web and in PS.

- APSA is launching its first organized program review of the CFP program with a largely outside review committee. Council approved the next topic for review, APSA's minority programs.

- Linda Lopez reported on the success of the Teaching and Learning Conference. Council will receive names for the next conference's program committee shortly after the meeting.

- Council voted unanimously to endorse with enthusiasm the directions proposed by the International Committee. Specific actions included in the budget involve scaling back foreign postage subsidies and adding funds for Annual Meeting travel for scholars from non-OECD countries. The Council looks forward to working with the International Committee to achieve its proposed goals in ways that achieve maximum results from our commitments.

- Council unanimously approved the redesign of the associate membership category to include receipt of any one of the APSA journals—Perspectives, APSR, or PS—effectively allowing journal subscriptions by non-members.

- Council reviewed a request from the new status committee to incorporate Asian Pacific Americans into the Minority Fellowships and Bunche Institute programs. Council acted with one abstention to postpone the inclusion of Asian Pacific American Political Scientists into the minority fellowship programs until the program review committee has had an opportunity to review all APSA minority programs and objectives.

- Council unanimously approved a new section journal on teaching and learning and noted that Section #26 (Ecological and Transformational Politics) will terminate after a 3-year probationary period if membership does not reach minimum required levels by June.

- With the successful conclusion of the Centennial Campaign, the Development Committee is converting its efforts into a continuing annual campaign. The committee is meeting soon by conference call and will solicit priorities and look for help in providing funding leadership from the Council.

- Council unanimously approved the proposed 2005 program committee division chairs with the proviso that chairs have the ability to change and add names as necessary.

- The Council heard discussion that a few political science journals are rejecting some articles without review and asked that this issue be addressed by the combined journal editors when they meet at the APSA meeting.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

APSA Task Force on Inequality and American Democracy Releases Report

"Equal political voice and democratically responsive government are widely cherished American ideals. Indeed, the United States is vigorously promoting democracy abroad. Yet, what is happening to democracy at home? Our country's ideals of equal citizenship and responsive government may be under growing threat in an era of persistent and rising inequalities. Disparities of income, wealth, and access to opportunity are growing more sharply in the United States than in many other nations, and gaps between races and ethnic groups persist. Progress toward realizing American ideals of democracy may have stalled, and in some arenas reversed."

So writes the Task Force on Inequality and American Democracy in the opening page of its newly released general report, "American Democracy in an Age of Rising Inequality." The 15-member Task Force, chaired by Lawrence Jacobs of the University of Minnesota, was appointed by 2002 APSA President Theda Skocpol to review and assess the best current scholarship about the health and functioning of U.S. democracy in a time of rising inequality. In completing its work, the committee has prepared three distinct components:

- A short report aimed at the general public and journalists written in a clear and forceful manner intended to provoke both interest and debate. This report reflects the interest of the Council, Association, and profession to expand the public presence of political science in the broader debates about American and international politics.
- Extensive reviews of political science research on economic, gender, racial, and ethnic inequalities in American politics within three principal areas of scholarly analysis—political "voice" (political behavior and public opinion), governance (representation and the institutional and political dynamics of the lawmaking branches), and public policy and its feedback on political voice and governance. These three critical reviews offer a state of the art analysis of existing research on inequality and American democracy written in a language and tone that is accessible to undergraduates, graduate students, and scholars in diverse fields and disciplines.
- Extensive teaching modules on inequality and American democracy. The teaching materials provide a "master" guideline to nearly two dozen distinct topics for instructors designing their own course syllabus at the undergraduate and graduate levels. In addition, individual syllabi are offered as illustration for how this material might be assembled.

All of the materials and a list of Task Force members can be found on the APSA web site <www.apsanet.org/inequality>. The report was received by the APSA Council at its spring meeting in Chicago.

These reports represent the voice of the Task Force, not the American Political Science Association. The conclusions are meant to provoke discussion and debate, not only in professional circles, but also in the broader public. APSA and the Task Force are disseminating materials widely. In June, a briefing at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. was held to release the Task Force report. This year's APSA Annual Meeting will sponsor three events focusing on aspects of the Task Force report, including a panel with George Soros, a roundtable with Task Force members, and a workshop on developing courses based on its findings. Details on these events are available on the APSA web site and in the October issue of PS.

As part of the dissemination, the Russell Sage Foundation will publish an edited book, tentatively titled "Inequality and American Democracy: What We Know and What We Need to Learn," centered around the three working groups principal areas of scholarly analysis—participation, governance, and public policy.

APSA Task Force on Graduate Curriculum Releases Findings

In spring of 2002, APSA named a group of scholars to serve on a Task Force on Graduate Education at the instigation of then president-elect Theda Skocpol. The nine-member committee was co-chaired by Christopher Achen of Princeton University and Rogers Smith of the University of Pennsylvania. The committee's charge was to assess the current condition, problems, and options for improvement in political science graduate education in the United States. The invited scholars represented a wide variety of backgrounds, subfields, methodologies, institutions, and levels of seniority.

At its April meeting in Chicago, the APSA Council accepted the Task Force's revised report and recommended its wide dissemination. The Task Force concluded that the challenges of providing adequate graduate education in political science today are more daunting than ever before. While the Task Force found that one single structure of graduate training could be appropriate for the side range of institutions offering graduate instruction, it agreed that certain basic principles should be embodied. As cited in the report's introduction, these principles are not so broad as to be trivial; they are also controversial. The report describes the principles and their rationales and then reviews a series of options for their pursuit by individual departments, institutions, and APSA.

A complete copy of the Task Force Report can be found at the APSA web site <www.apsanet.org>

APSA Task Force on Difference & Inequality in the Developing World

In March, President Susanne Rudolph met with the members of the APSA Task Force on Difference and Inequality in the Developing World. After hearing opening remarks by Saskia Sassen, the task force members shared their interests and research experience and began brainstorming ideas about how to bolster the discipline's public presence. The group also determined prospective target audiences and established some possible avenues through which to approach them. The first major event sponsored by the task force will be a roundtable held at the Annual Meeting in Chicago, entitled "Trajectories of Inequality," with presentations on the topic as it relates to each region of the world.

The task force also initially divided its substantive work between two subcommittees, each led by co-chairs: (1) Inequality, Democracy, and Conflict and (2) Inequality and Development.

The task force represents President Rudolph's interest in supporting the problem-oriented study of politics and encouraging political scientists to establish a visible public presence. The objective of this task force is to assemble what political science knows about key global problems and find ways and means by which our scholarship might influence public opinion, shape discourse in the public sphere, and influence policy makers. Established for a two-year term, the task force will be particularly concerned with finding ways for political scientists to foster America's capacity to understand, engage with, and learn from cultures, ideologies, and religions beyond those found in the Atlantic community.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Perspectives on Politics Editor Search Committee Seeks Nominations

APSA has opened the search process for a successor to Perspectives on Politics Editor Jennifer Hochschild of Harvard University. Applications and nominations are sought for an editor or editorial team of Perspectives, published quarterly by APSA. Perspectives is a general political science journal that draws on rigorous, broad-based research and integrative thinking to provide insight on significant political matters. The journal seeks to capture the excitement and diversity of good political science research and apply it to contemporary politics.

Candidates should be prepared to offer a vision for the journal—commenting specifically on anticipated continuities as well as changes to the journal's current approach and style. Relevant criteria for the editorship are scholarly achievement, breadth of interest, relevant experience, literary skill, and organizational experience.

The journal currently operates with an editor in chief and five associate editors who are responsible for specific subfields. We welcome applicants to consider alternative structures that would help with the work load. This could include, for example, an application from two or three co-editors with clearly delineated responsibilities.

The APSA will compensate the editor at 2/9ths of salary and will also provide significant financial support for a managing editor and for copy editing. The Association anticipates that the editor(s)' home institution will provide support for three half-time assistants as well as office space and equipment.

Once an editor (or editorial team) has been selected, the editor will select book review editors in consultation with the search committee. Susanne Rudolph and Margaret Levi have named a search committee consisting of:

James A. Morone, Brown University, Chair
Stephen D. Ansolabehere, MIT
Fredrick C. Harris, University of Rochester
David A. Lake, University of California-San Diego
Lisa Wedeen, University of Chicago
Dvora Yanow, California State University-Hayward.

APSA members should send letters of interest or nominations to Search Committee, APSA, 1527 New Hampshire Ave, NW, Washington DC 20036-1206 or to brintnall@apsanet.org. The committee will begin reviewing nominations July 10. Visit www.apsanet.org/perspectives/editor.cfm for more information.

APSA Hosts Workshop on Women's Advancement in Political Science

Committee Members (Kristen Moore, Leonie Huddie, and Susan Clark) from the Task Force on Mentoring were instrumental in securing funding for a recent APSA workshop held on Friday March 5, 2004 to discuss the career advancement of women in political science. The attendees included 25 political scientists from around the country as well as National Science Foundation program officers. The workshop was funded in part by an NSF Small Grant for Exploratory Research (SGER). The workshop had the following goals:

> Clarify the rate of progress of women in political science at all levels of academic rank
>
> Clarify the key advancement problems confronted by women in political science; for example, are women having greater difficulty in getting promoted to full professor than in gaining tenure?
>
> Explore the origins of women's differential rate of advancement by prestige of the university and by subfield in political science.
>
> Identify the key barriers to women's academic success at different transition points.

The grant funds evaluation of the current knowledge base regarding women's advancement in political science and identification of the major barriers to women's numerical increase in the discipline. To foster exchange across social science fields and benefit from evidence obtained by sociologists and economists, the workshop participants invited several scholars who have studied women's development in the sciences and social sciences. In addition, invited participants included political scientists who direct large-scale team-based research projects, hold leadership positions in the field, and/or have an active interest in gender issues and the advancement of women. Plans are underway to secure a larger grant from the National Science Foundation to develop successful interventions to prmote women's leadership and advancement in the discipline.

Ralph Bunche Summer Institute Names 2004 Class

The American Political Science Association is pleased to announce the class for the 2004 Ralph Bunche Summer Institute. The Institute is in its 18th year of operation and will again be hosted by Duke University. The Selection Committee for the 2004 class included Paula McClain, director of RBSI, and other members of Duke University faculty: Scott DeMarche, Kerry Haynie, John Aldrich, and John Transue. Twenty outstanding students, representing diverse institutions all over the country, will participate in this summer's program, scheduled for June 6–July 8. They are:

Kandia C. Barnes, West Virginia State University
Michael Brown II, Stanford University
Darline Carpenter, University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff
Alexandre Charles, Hofstra University
Porsha Q. Cropper, Stanford University
Carlos E. Cuellar, St. Mary's University
Olufunmbi Elemo, Ball State University
Rosalyn L. Foster, Amherst College
Antoine D. Jumelle, Yale University
Chryl Laird, University of Maryland, College Park
Roneka E. Matheny, Emory University
Saleema Moore, Dartmouth College
Davin L. Phoenix, Christopher Newport University
Dwayne Robertson, Eastern Connecticut State University
Hugo I. Salazar, University of California, Irvine
Erica C. Solis, Hendrix College
Sedrick Walker, Texas A & M University
Eugene Walton, Jr., Truman State University
Michael Woldemariam, Beloit College
Lisa S. Ybarra, Whittier College

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

APSA Names 2004 Small Research Grant Winners

APSA is pleased to announce the recipients of the 2004 Small Research Grant competition. This year, awards averaging $1,636 went to 11 scholars. The Small Research Grant Program supports research in all fields of political science. The intent of these grants is to support the research of political scientists who are not employed at Ph.D.-granting institutions. For more information on the program and application procedures, please visit the APSA web site <www.apsanet.org/opps/apsagrants.cfm>.

Rebecca Bill Chavez
U.S. Naval Academy
"The Rule of Law in Democratization and Development: The Construction of Independent Judiciaries in Latin America"
Chavez will use this grant to explore how nascent democracies construct the rule of law, hypothesizing that monolithic party control stands in the way of judicial independence.

Thomas S. DeLuca
Fordham University
"Three Case Studies in Constitutional Development in China"
DeLuca will use this grant to further investigate three important legal cases in which Chinese citizens attempted in court to use provisions of the Chinese constitution to protect perceived violations of their rights; the work will be integrated into an edited volume.

Mary Fitzgerald
James Madison University
"Alternative Voting Methods and Electoral Mobilization in the U.S."
Fitzgerald will use this grant to explore the question: How do recent voting reforms and alternative voting methods in the states, such as in-person early voting, unrestricted absentee voting, and Election Day registration, influence electoral mobilization activities conducted by political parties and other groups?

Eric R. Giordano
Unaffiliated Scholar
"The U.S. Army and Nontraditional Missions: Explaining Divergence in Doctrine and Practice in the Post-Cold War Era"
Giordano's study proposes to explain how and why U.S. Army doctrine diverges from practice by creating a framework to uncover their disjunction and introducing the doctrine-practice relationship as a new dependent variable to be tested against the prevailing theoretical explanations of military organizational change: Realism, Organization Theory, Institutional Theory, and Organizational Culture Theory.

Elise Giuliano
University of Miami
"Why Secession Fails: The Rise and Fall of Ethnic Minority Nationalism in Russia"
Giuliano's project will 1) use field research completed for her doctoral dissertation to identify variables driving the rise and fall of popular support for nationalism in Tatarstan, Russia's most separatist republic, and 2) to test the generalizability of these findings by comparing mobilization in Russia's 20 other ethnic republics.

Manjusha Gupte
North Dakota State University
"'Engendering' Participatory Environmental Policy"
While most studies have focused on the environmental outcomes of participatory environmental policy, Gupte's research project focuses on the process underlying these policies by comparatively examining four Indian villages.

Krzystof Jasiewicz
Washington and Lee University
"The European Union Accession Referendum in Poland"
Jasiewicz's project explores both ideological and structural sources of pro- and anti-European attitudes in Poland, and places the referendum vote in the broader context of voting behavior in Poland and other new and old EU member-states.

Gary Lee Malecha,
University of Portland
Daniel J. Reagan
Ball State University
"Congress in the Post-Network News Age"
This project investigates, how members of Congress have adapted and responded to the "new media environment" created by the emergence and proliferation of cable news and political talk shows.

Sally Jo Vasicko
Ball State University
"The Evolving Role of Supreme Court Clerks: The Warren, Burger, and Rehnquist Courts"
Vasicko will use this grant to conduct additional interviews with former Supreme Court clerks, focusing on the evolving role of clerks during the Warren, Burger, and Rehnquist Courts.

Stephen M. Shellman
College of William and Mary
"Modeling the Spatial-Temporal Dynamics of Refugee-IDP Flows: A Case Study Approach"
Shellman's project proposes to model the spatial-temporal dynamics of forced migrant and repatriation flows in and out of several countries and to develop theoretically driven causal models for these flows.

Margit Bessenyey Williams
University of South Florida
"Flexible or Fortress Europe? The Eastward Shift of European Union Borders and its Effect on Regional Stability in Eastern Europe"
Williams will use this grant to examine the effects of the EU's Schengen border regime for cross-border relations in Eastern Europe.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

News and Notes

Visiting Scholars Program at Carl Albert Center

The Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center at the University of Oklahoma seeks applicants for its Visiting Scholars Program, which provides financial assistance to researchers working at the Center's archives. Awards of $500–$1,000 are granted for reimbursement of travel and lodging. The Center's collections are described at <www.ou.edu/special/albertctr/archives/>. The Visiting Scholars Program is open to all applicants, though emphasis is given to those pursing postdoctoral research in history, political science, or other fields. For more information, contact channeman@ou.edu.

Columbia Society Announces Fellowships

The Columbia Society of Fellows in the Humanities will appoint a number of postdoctoral fellows in the humanities for the academic year 2005–2006. The Society seeks to enhance the role of the humanities in the University by exploring and clarifying the interrelationships within the humanities as well as their relationship to the natural and social sciences. Fellows for the $50,000 stipend must have received their Ph.D. between January 1, 1999 and July 1, 2005. Deadline for applications is October 1, 2004. Visit <www.columbia.edu/cu/societyoffellows> for more information.

National Humanities Center Fellowships

The National Humanities Center is offering 40 residential fellowships in the Research Triangle Park area of North Carolina for advanced study in the humanities during the 2005–2006 academic year. Applicants must hold their Ph.D. at time of application. Most of the Center's fellowships are unrestricted. The application deadline is October 15, 2004. For more information, visit <www.nhc.rtp.nc.us> or contact nhc@ga.unc.edu.

Campaign Media Guide Published

The Campaign Legal Center has published a comprehensive primer on candidates' and citizens' rights and broadcasters' obligations during the 2004 election season. The Campaign Media Guide contains the most recent FCC and FEC regulations and is designed as a hands-on resource for those broadcasting, covering, or simply following the 2004 election. For more information on the Guide, including how to access it online, visit <www.campaignlegalcenter.org>.

National Science Foundation Grants Available

The National Science Foundation's Political Science Program provides grants for scientific research that advances knowledge and understanding of citizenship, government, and politics. Research proposals are expected to be theoretically motivated, conceptually precise, methodologically rigorous, and empirically oriented. Substantive areas include, but are not limited to, American government and politics, comparative government and politics, international relations, political behavior, political economy, and political institutions. Application deadlines are January 15 and August 15, annually. For more information, visit <www.nsf.gov/sbe/ses/polisci/start.htm>.

Southwest Political Science Association Calls for Papers

The Southwest Political Science Association seeks paper, panel, and roundtable proposals in a variety of subfields for the Southwestern Social Science Association's annual meeting March 23–26, 2005, in New Orleans. The deadline for proposals is October 1, 2004. For full details visit <www.swpsa.org>.

A LOOK AHEAD
Perspectives on Politics

Here's an early look at some of the articles you'll see in the September Perspectives on Politics:

Articles

Is Gender Like Ethnicity? The Political Representation of Identity Groups
Mala Htun

Pitkin's Dilemma: The Wider Shores of Political Theory and Political Science
Ruth Lane

Social Science and Liberal Values in a Time of War
Jeffrey C. Isaac

Distance and Engagement in a Time of War: Comments on "Social Science and Liberal Values"
Peter Breiner

Symposium
U.S. Elections—How the Rules You Choose and the Way You Count Determine the Winners You Get

Rules, Counting, Winners, and Losers: Symposium Introduction
Henry E. Brady

Punishment and Democracy: Disenfranchisement of Nonincarcerated Felons in the United States
Jeff Manza and Christopher Uggen

Registration and Voting in the United States
Benjamin Highton

Punch Card Technology and the Racial Gap in Residual Votes
Justin Buchler, Matthew Jarvis, and John E. McNulty

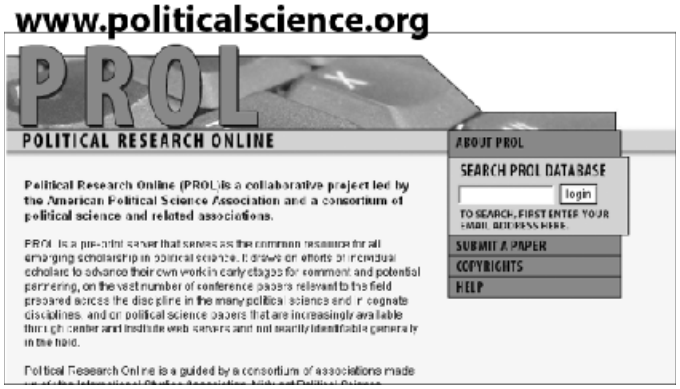

The Wrong Man is President! Overvotes in the 2000 Presidential Election in Florida
Walter R. Mebane, Jr.

Did Illegal Overseas Absentee Ballots Decide the 2000 U.S. Presidential Election?
Kosuke Imai and Gary King

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

PROL Brings Political Research Online

Site offers free access to nearly 10,000 papers

The American Political Science Association and a consortium of scholarly organizations have developed Political Research Online (PROL), a new resource for political scientists. Made possible through generous funding by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, PROL is a comprehensive electronic archive of pre-published research in political science. PROL consists of four major components:

Conference Papers

Conference papers are the cornerstone of PROL and represent the greatest volume of pre-published scholarship in political science. Through PROL, APSA provides support for other associations to place their conference papers online.

Preprints

PROL provides an outlet for individual scholarly papers for comment or dissemination at early, pre-published stages.

Syllabi

PROL provides an outlet for scholars to share successful course syllabi. Syllabi are grouped by field and are searchable.

Center and Institute Reports

PROL incorporates and links political science research conducted through centers and institutes and presented on their web servers. Often this work is accessible only through outlets that are currently unknown to most political scientists and those seeking political science research. PROL thus bridges multi-disciplinary and subfield divides.

How to Use PROL

The PROL search engine is open to all members of the scholarly community. Before searching, users log in using their email address. Email addresses of individual members of APSA or of the PROL consortium are recognized. If a user's email address is not recognized, the user is asked to complete a brief registration form. Users may then search the database across title, author, subject, and full text. Users may choose to search all papers or look only at one particular meeting. A full citation and, when available, an abstract is provided for each paper along with a link to the PDF copy.

Submitting a Paper or Syllabus to PROL

Members of the political science community are encouraged to post papers on PROL. Individuals presenting a paper at the conference of a PROL-participating organization will receive instructions on posting their paper directly from that organization. Individuals participating in other conferences—from a state association meeting to a small political theory gathering—may upload their papers at anytime through the "submit a paper" icon. Users will be asked to provide details about the conference that allows for a complete citation and then will be able to upload their abstract and paper.

An individual scholar wishing to upload a working draft of early research may also post to the site. This paper will be identified as a working paper to scholars searching the database by a special icon. The author should note on the submission form whether the paper may or may not be cited and provide an email address to which comments may be directed.

Why to Use PROL

- check PROL for early scholarship in areas you are working in
- locate scholars with interests in specific areas
- finding promising new discoveries
- gain feedback on your early work

To learn more about PROL visit politicalscience.org or contact Sean Twombly at twombly@apsanet.org

The PROL Consortium

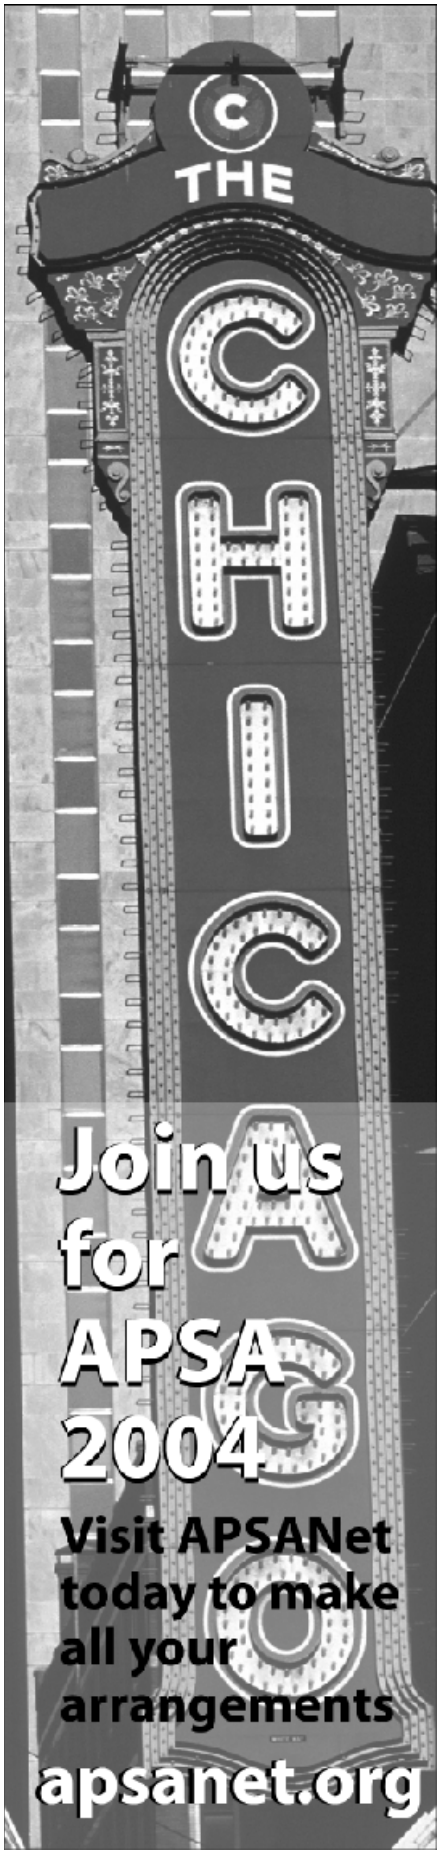

PROL represents a partnership between APSA and over a dozen scholarly organizations. The consortium continuously seeks out new partners. The following organizations represent those who display work on PROL or are participating in its organization and development:

- American Society for Public Administration
- International Political Science Association
- International Studies Association
- Midwest Political Science Association
- National Conference of Black Political Scientists
- New England Political Science Association
- Northeastern Political Science Association
- Political Studies Association (UK)
- Southwestern Political Science Association
- Southern Political Science Association
- Western Political Science Association

For more details on becoming a member of the PROL consortium please contact Sean Twombly at twombly@apsanet.org.

Access PROL at:
www.politicalscience.org

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Washington Insider

Non-Defense Discretionary Spending Increases Unlikely

House and Senate Budgetary Committees are set to soon unveil allocations for 13 appropriations subcommittees for the discretionary portion of federal spending. In an election year, and with the national debt reaching previously unfathomed depths, experts do not expect much in the way of non-defense discretionary spending. In the House, presumably any proposed increases will have to be hashed out, perhaps leaving the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) out in the cold. Experts expect that if the NEA and NEH are left out that increases will be proposed on the floor for the agencies. Congress is looking for myriad solutions to quickly appropriate funds for FY2005. Among these are potential proposal is one to present an early, full omnibus bill and one to group the 13 appropriation bills into three or four "mini-omnibus" bills. Proposals akin to that offered this year for NEH funding would appear much more difficult to secure this year.

Bush Announces, Congress Questions Archivist Choice

On April 8, President Bush announced his intention to nominate Allen Weinstein to replace John W. Carlin as Archivist of the United States. The announcement brought near-immediate concern from the National Coalition of History (NCH) and from Senators on the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee. Senators Susan M. Collins (Chair) and Joseph I. Lieberman (Ranking Member) drafted a letter formally requesting that the Senate "initiate the process of formal consultation with members of our [history and archives] community." This letter was accompanied by two papers—the first outlaying detailed questions that ought to be asked of the nominee, the second detailing selection criteria for the Archivist position. The papers were prepared jointly by the Society of American Archivists, the National Association of Government Archives and Records Administrators, and the Council of State Historical Records Coordinators.

The papers stated that these organizations, not the president, should provide nominations for this position and that this process must conform to legal requirements. The nomination of Dr. Weinstein was made without consultation "with professional organizations of archivists or historians." The paper then called for "an open and transparent process for selecting, nominating, and confirming the next Archivist of the United States" and seeks "the reasons why the Archivist [John Carlin] is being replaced."

Government Secrecy Classification on the Rise

An annual report to the president by the Information Security Oversight Office (ISOO) highlights a marked increase in national security secrecy last year. FY2003 (14,228,020 classified documents) saw an increase of 25% of executive branch agency classification from FY2002 (11,271,618 classified documents). According to Steve Aftergood of the Federation of American Scientists, a group that monitors government secrecy activities, "The report confirms what many people have suspected: that the volume of official secrecy is expanding." A copy of the ISOO annual report for FY2003 is available at <www.fas.org/sgp/isoo/2003rpt.pdf>.

Sources for this column include the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History's NCC Washington Update, the Chronicle of Higher Education, and the Consortium of Social Science Associations' Washington Update.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press

ONLINE

Your best resource for 2004 APSA Annual Meeting information is APSANet. Log on to find all the necessary meeting details, including:

- meeting preregistration. register securely online.
- hotel reservations. reserve your room with the online ITS system.
- airline reservations. the Association's official travel agency, ITS, offers online reservations.
- child care. sign up for KiddieCorp.
- PROceedings. access Annual Meeting papers for 2004 (beginning in August).
- dining guide. River North to the West Loop. Discover all of Chicago's dining hot spots.
- preliminary program. find out who, what, and when. the online preliminary program is the most up-to-date and detailed option for information on panels, meetings, and receptions in Chicago.

National Capital Area Political Science Association Honors Patricia S. Florestano

Members of the National Capital Area Political Science Association (NCAPSA) gathered May 13, 2004, at the Washington, D.C. campus of Johns Hopkins University for their annual meeting. The event featured a panel on "Careers in Political Science: Academic and Applied Opportunities" which discussed several key issues related to finding political science jobs in and out of academe. Referencing their own professional experiences, panelists offered numerous pointers on the various aspects of the job search, particularly stressing to the graduate students in the audience the importance of a strong "job talk." The panelists included: Ben Ginsberg, Johns Hopkins University; John Samples, Cato Institute; Lee Sigelman, George Washington University; and Pam Winston, Mathematica Policy Research.

At the meeting, the 2004 NCAPSA Pi Sigma Alpha Award was presented to Patricia S. Florestano in recognition of her public service as a political scientist. Florestano, a former professor of government at the University of Baltimore, is currently a member of the Board of Regents at the University of Maryland and chair of its Education Policy Committee. The author of numerous works in the fields of public administration and public policy, she is former secretary of higher education for the State of Maryland (1995–2000).

At the annual business meeting, Michael Baer of the American Council on Education was elected president for 2004–2005. Michael Fauntroy, George Mason University, and Pam Winston, Mathematica Policy Research were elected to one-year terms as vice presidents. Linda Lopez of APSA was reappointed Secretary/Treasurer and the following council members were named: David Balducchi, Department of Labor (3 years); Walter Beach, Helen Dwight Reid Educational Foundation (1 year); Susan Hammond, American University (2 years); Shiela Harmon-Martin, University of District of Columbia (3 years); John White, Catholic University (2 years); Priscilla Regan, George Mason University (3 years); Linda Williams, University of Maryland (2 years); Howard Silver, Washington College (3 years); Lee Sigelman, George Washington University (3 years); John Tambornino, Johns Hopkins University (2 years); Shirley Anne Warshaw, Gettysburg College (1 year); Clyde Wilcox, Georgetown University (1 year).

2003–2004 NCAPSA President Ben Ginsberg (r) of Johns Hopkins University presents the 2004 Pi Sigma Alpha Award to Patricia S. Florestano. Photo courtesy of Jo Freeman.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096504004962 Published online by Cambridge University Press