Contributors

ERWIN C. HARGROVE is Professor Emeritus of political science at Vanderbilt University. His scholarship covers political and administrative leadership and the American presidency, with some attention to comparative political leadership. His recent books include Jimmy Carter as President: Leadership and the Politics of the Public Good (Louisiana State University Press, 1988); Prisoners of Myth: The Leadership of the Tennessee Valley Authority, 1933–1990 (Princeton University Press, 1994); and The President as Leader: Appealing to the Better Angels of Our Nature (University Press of Kansas, 1998).

ALONZO L. HAMBY is Distinguished Professor of History at Ohio University.

MARK WICKHAM-JONES is Senior Lecturer in Politics, University of Bristol, and author of Economic Strategy and the Labour Party (Macmillan, 1996).

DAVID S. BELL is the Head of Social Sciences and Law at the University of Leeds, U.K., and is the author of books and articles on French politics and government (notably The French Socialist Party with B. Criddle), as well as on the British Labour party and comparative political parties.

UWE JUN is Assistant Professor at the University of Potsdam, Department of Economics and Political Science. His research interests include political parties in Western Europe, parliamentarism, and political communication. He has written various articles on German and West European Politics.

HUBERT TWORZECKI teaches Political Science at Emory University and is the Director of the Russian and East European Studies Program. His books include Parties and Politics in Post-1989 Poland (Westview Press, 1996) and Learning to Choose: Electoral Politics in East-Central Europe (Stanford University Press, forthcoming).

ROBERT LADRECH is Senior Lecturer in the School of Politics, International Relations and the Environment (SPIRE) at Keele University in the U.K. He is the author of Social Democracy and the Challenge of European Union (2000) and articles on transnational parties, French politics, and party politics. He is currently engaged in a research project concerning the "Europeanization" of national political parties.

THOMAS F. REMINGTON is Professor of Political Science at Emory University. He is author of The Russian Parliament: Institutional Evolution in a Transitional Regime, 1989–1999 (Yale University Press, 2001) and, with Steven S. Smith, The Politics of Institutional Choice: Formation of the Russian State Duma (Princeton University Press, 2001). Other books include Politics in Russia (1998; second edition 2001); Parliaments in Transition (1994); and The Truth of Authority: Ideology and Communication in the Soviet Union (1988). His research focuses on the development of democratic institutions in postcommunist Russia, particularly the legislative branch, and legislative-executive relations.

https://doi.org/10.1353/jph.2003.0001 Published online by Cambridge University Press