NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Bradley R. Agle is the George W. Romney Endowed Professor in the Marriott School of Management at Brigham Young University. He is also a Fellow in the Wheatley Institution at BYU, where he chairs the institution's ethics initiative, including the annual Teaching Ethics in Universities Conference, co-sponsored by the Society for Business Ethics. His current interests involve empirical methods in ethics research and the moral development of college students. His research has been published in various outlets including the Academy of Management Review, Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Business Ethics, Leadership Quarterly, and the Sloan Management Review. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Washington. E-mail: bradagle@byu.edu.

Keith H. Brigham is an associate professor of entrepreneurship in the Rawls College of Business at Texas Tech University, where he is the director of entrepreneurship programs. His primary research interests are in entrepreneurship, entrepreneurial cognition and decision making, and family business. His research has been published in a number of journals, such as the Journal of Business Venturing, Entrepreneurship Theory & Practice, Family Business Review, Organizational Research Methods, and The Leadership Quarterly. He currently serves on the editorial review board of Family Business Review. E-mail: keith.brigham@ttu.edu.

J. Christian Broberg is an assistant professor of management and entrepreneurship at Wichita State University. His current research interests include determinants of innovative activity, business model innovation, entrepreneurial teams, content analysis, and family business. His research has appeared in the Family Business Review and Organizational Research Methods. He received his Ph.D. from Texas Tech University. E-mail: chris.broberg@wichita.edu.

James J. Chrisman is a professor of management and director of the Center of Family Enterprise Research at Mississippi State University. He holds a joint appointment as a research fellow with the Centre of Entrepreneurship and Family Enterprise at the University of Alberta. E-mail: jchrisman@cobilan.msstate.edu.

Joanne B. Ciulla is professor and Coston Family Chair in Leadership and Ethics at the Jepson School of Leadership Studies, University of Richmond, Gourley Visiting Professor of Business Ethics at University of Melbourne, and visiting professor at European Institute of Business Ethics at Nyenrode Business Universiteit (Netherlands) and the University of Fort Hare (South Africa). Her most recent book, co-edited by Robert Clancy Martin and Robert C. Solomon, is Honest Work: A Business Ethics Reader, 2nd edition (Oxford University Press, 2011). She is on the editorial boards of BEQ, Leadership Quarterly, and Leadership and she was the 2010 president of SBE. E-mail: jciulla@richmond.edu.

Wim Dubbink is associate professor of business ethics at the Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities, Tilburg University, The Netherlands. His area of expertise is Kantian political and moral philosophy, as applied to business ethics and the political theory of free market. He wrote Assisting the Invisible Hand: Contested Relations Between Market, State and Civil Society (2003). One of his most recent papers, entitled "A Neo-Kantian Foundation of Corporate Social Responsibility" and co-authored by Luc van Liedekerke, appeared in Ethical Theory and Moral Practice (2009). E-mail: w.dubbink@uvt.nl.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121222 Published online by Cambridge University Press

TIMOTHY L. FORT is the executive director of the Institute for Corporate Responsibility and holds the Lindner-Gambal Professorship of Business Ethics at George Washington University Business School. He is the author of Business, Integrity, and Peace (Cambridge University Press, 2007), Prophets, Profits, and Peace (Yale University Press, 2008), and Ethics and Governance: Business as Mediating Institution (Oxford University Press, 2001). He is co-author of The Role of Business in Fostering Peaceful Societies (Cambridge University Press, 2004). E-mail: timfort@gwu.edu.

THOMAS A. KLEIN is professor of marketing emeritus (in service) and a senior fellow in the Business Ethics and Social Policy Program in the College of Business Administration at the University of Toledo. He is also adjunct professor of business administration at TUI University. He is author of Social Costs and Benefits of Business (Prentice Hall, 1977) and co-author of Ethical Marketing (Pearson Prentice Hall, 2005). He is also a member of the editorial policy board of the Journal of Macromarketing. E-mail: Thomas.Klein@UToledo.edu.

REBECCA G. LONG is an associate professor of management in the Department of Management & Information Systems at Mississippi State University. The focus of her research interest is in the developmental and procedural impacts of social exchange and social capital on family/business systems. Her research has been published in the Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Management, Organizational Research Methods, the Journal of Management Inquiry, and Human Relations. E-mail: rebecca.long@msstate.edu.

K. MICHAEL MATHEWS is an associate professor of management in the Department of Business Administration and Coordinator of the MBA program at College of Saint Rose in Albany. His research interests include entrepreneurship, organizational change dynamics, and the applications of complexity sciences to organizational phenomena. He has published in such outlets as the Journal of Applied Behavioral Sciences, Human Relations, and the Journal of Management Inquiry. E-mail: mathewsm@mail.strose.edu.

RONALD K. MITCHELL holds the Jean Austin Bagley Regents Chair in Management in the Rawls College of Business at Texas Tech University. He is interested in new value creation, individual and organizational moral reasoning and ethical capacity, and assisting with effective engagement among actors within the global business community—through the study of entrepreneurs, the further development of stakeholder theory, and the introduction and development of transaction systems

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121222 Published online by Cambridge University Press

theory. He publishes in the top journals in entrepreneurship, ethics, and management. E-mail: ronald.mitchell@ttu.edu.

Todd W. Moss is a Ph.D. candidate in management at Texas Tech University. His research focuses on entrepreneurship, social responsibility, and exploration and exploitation. His research has appeared in journals such as the Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal, Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice, and The Leadership Quarterly, among others. E-mail: todd.moss@ttu.edu.

G. Tyge Payne is an associate professor of strategic management and holder of the Rawls Endowed Professorship of Management in the Rawls College of Business at Texas Tech University. His primary research interests include organization-environment fit/misfit, firm-level entrepreneurship, interorganizational relationships, and social capital. He has authored or co-authored numerous publications appearing in such outlets as Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice, Family Business Review, Health Care Management Review, Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of Management, Journal of Management Studies, and Organization Science, among others. He currently serves on the editorial boards of the Journal of Management and the Journal of Small Business Management, and is an elected member of the governing board of the Southern Management Association. E-mail: tyge.payne@ttu.edu.

Joan M. Phillips is an associate professor of marketing in the school of business administration at Loyola University Chicago. Her research interests include understanding how personal values impact consumer and managerial decision-making. Her research has been published in Journal of Consumer Research, MIT Sloan Management Review, Review of Marketing Research, Journal of Public Policy & Marketing, Marketing Letters, Journal of Marketing Theory and Practice, and Qualitative Market Research: An International Journal. E-mail: jphillips@luc.edu.

Pramodita Sharma is the CIBC Distinguished Professor of Family Business at the John Molson School of Business, Concordia University, Montreal. She is also the Global Director of the Successful Trans-generational Entrepreneurship Practices (STEP) project at the Babson College, USA. She serves as the editor of Family Business Review. Her research is focused on issues of interest to family enterprises such as entrepreneurship, innovation, succession, next-generation commitment, and governance. This research has appeared in Entrepreneurship Theory & Practice, Journal of Business Venturing, and Journal of Business Research, amongst others. Her most recent co-authored (with Frank Hoy) book, Entrepreneurial Family Firms, is widely used in family business courses around the world and has been translated into Mandarin and Greek. E-mail: psharma@jmsb.concordia.ca.

Sanjay Sharma is the dean of the John Molson School of Business, Concordia University, Montreal. Before joining Concordia, he was the Canada Research Chair of Organizational Sustainability and the director of the Centre for Responsible Organizations at the School of Business and Economics, Wilfrid Laurier University, Waterloo, Canada. His research focuses on how organizations develop internal motivations and build capacity and capabilities to reconcile their economic, social, and environmental performance and generate competitive advantage via sustainable business models in developed and developing nation contexts. His research has been published in journals such as Academy of Management Review, Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Executive, Strategic Management Journal, and Journal of Marketing, amongst others. E-mail: ssharma@jmsb.concordia.ca.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121222 Published online by Cambridge University Press

JEREMY C. SHORT is the Jerry S. Rawls Professor of Management at Texas Tech University. His research focuses on multilevel determinants of firm performance, strategic decision processes, entrepreneurship, and research methods. He is currently an associate editor for the Journal of Management, and he currently serves on the review board for Organizational Research Methods. His research has appeared in a number of journals, including the Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal, Strategic Management Journal, Organization Science, Organizational Research Methods, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, the Journal of Management, Personnel Psychology, Academy of Management Learning and Education, the Journal of Management Education, the Journal of Vocational Behavior, and Health Care Management Review, among others. E-mail: jeremy.short@ttu.edu.

JEFFERY SMITH is the founding director of the Banta Center for Business, Ethics and Society and is currently associate professor of business ethics at the University of Redlands School of Business. His current research focuses moral and political philosophy and its relation to foundational problems in business ethics and corporate responsibility. He is the editor of Normative Theory and Business Ethics (2008), and his articles have appeared in the Journal of Business Ethics, Ethical Theory and Moral Practice, the Southern Journal of Philosophy, and other journals. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota. Email: jeffery_smith@redlands.edu.

LAURA J. SPENCE is director of the Centre for Research into Sustainability and a reader in business ethics at Royal Holloway, University of London, UK. She specializes in ethics in small business, for which she is the section editor of the Journal of Business Ethics, and on which she has published widely. Recent books include Ethics in Small and Medium Sized Enterprises: A Global Commentary (2010), co-edited with Mollie Painter-Morland, and CSR: Readings and Cases in a Global Context (2008), co-edited with Andrew Crane and Dirk Matten. Laura is vice-president of the International Society for Business, Economics and Ethics. E-mail: Laura.Spence@rhul.ac.uk.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121222 Published online by Cambridge University Press