Activities

Janet Afary, associate professor of history, women's studies, and political science and Kevin B. Anderson, professor of political science, sociology, and women's studies at Purdue University, West Lafayette, were interviewed for the segment "A Shift in U.S.-Iran Relations?" on Worldview with Jerome McDonnell, WBEZ (National Public Radio) Chicago on June 1, and as part of program on "Iraq, Iran, and Gee's Bend" on the Marc Steiner Show, WYPR (National Public Radio) Baltimore on July 23.

David Mayhew, Yale University, was elected to the American Philosophical Society.

Frances Rosenbluth, Yale University, was newly designated as the Damon Wells Professor of International Politics and elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Brian F. Schaffner, assistant professor, department of government, American University, has been named editor of the journal Congress & the Presidency. He has also been named research director for the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies.

Administrative Appointments

Staci L. Beavers, chair, political science department, California State University, San Marcos.

John Coleman, chair, political science department, University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Albert Eldridge, director of undergraduate studies, political science department, Duke University.

James Fearon, chair, political science department, Stanford University.

David L. Feldman, professor and chair, department of planning, policy and design, University of California, Irvine.

Diane Hartmus, associate professor and director, master of public administration program, Oakland University.

Shaohua Hu, chairman, department of government and politics, Wagner College.

Mark Huddleston, president, University of New Hampshire.

Cornelius Kerwin, president, American University.

Paul J. Kubicek, chair, department of political science, Oakland University.

Brad Lockerbie, professor and chair, department of political science, East Carolina University.

Roger C. Lowery, professor, department of public & international affairs, University of North Carolina Wilmington, has accepted a four-year appointment as department chair.

Paula D. McClain, chair of the academic council, political science department, Duke University.

Jamal R. Nassar, dean, College of Arts & Sciences, California State University, San Bernadino

Ali Riaz, chair, politics and government, Illinois State University.

Sunil Sahu, chair, department of political science, DePauw University.

Helena Silverstein, professor and head, department of government and law, Lafayette College.

Peter Ubertaccio, associate professor and director, Joseph Martin Institute for Law & Society, Stonehill College.

Vincent Wei-cheng Wang, chair, department of political science, University of Richmond.

New Appointments

Pablo Baramendi, assistant professor, department of political science, Duke University.

James Coleman Battista, assistant professor, department of political science, SUNY at Buffalo.

Christopher Blattman, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University, effective July 1, 2008.

Marygrove Appoints Edward Thompson III as Provost

Marygrove College appointed Edward Thompson III, PhD, as provost, effective June 4, 2007.

He serves as Marygrove's chief operating officer with responsibility for all academic programs and activities related to the education of students through Student Affairs. He will also serve as lead decision maker in the president's absence.

Thompson served as vice president for Academic Affairs and dean of Faculty at Armstrong Atlantic State University in Savannah, GA, from 2002 to 2005. While at Armstrong, Thompson focused on enhanced student learning outcomes, the professional development of the faculty, and securing external grants to support academic and student programs.

His research in the areas of urban and ethnic politics, voting, and energy policy has appeared in such publications as: Social Science Quarterly, Publius, Urban Studies, National Political Science Review, Journal of Ethnic Studies, Sage Press, and Yale University Press.

Marygrove President David Fike said, "Dr. Thompson brings significant academic and civic leadership experience to Marygrove that fits uniquely well with our College's strategic vision of Urban Leadership. His solid administrative and faculty experience will assist us in preparing students to assume leadership positions in their chosen fields in Detroit, the metropolitan area and nation."

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Lisa Blaydes, assistant professor, department of political science, Stanford University.

John Bullock, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University, effective July 1, 2008.

Daniel Butler, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Douglas Carr, assistant professor, department of political science, Oakland University.

Alethia Cook, assistant professor, department of political science, East Carolina University.

Ana De La O Torres, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Dinissa Duvanova, assistant professor, department of political science, SUNY at Buffalo.

Karen Jusko, assistant professor, department of political science, Stanford University.

Timur Kuran, professor, departments of economics and political science, Gorter Family Chair in Islamic Studies, Duke University.

Adria Lawrence, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University, effective July 1, 2008.

Pei-te Lien, professor, department of political science, University of California, Santa Barbara.

Phillip Lipscy, assistant professor, department of political science, Stanford University.

Andrew March, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Elizabeth G. Matthews, assistant professor, political science department, California State University, San Marcos.

Ato Kwamena Onoma, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Harvey Palmer, associate professor, department of political science, SUNY at Buffalo.

Stephen Simon, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Richmond.

Virginia Sapiro, the former vice provost at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, is the new dean of the College and Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Boston University. Sapiro, a political scientist and women's studies scholar, replaces classics professor Jeffrey Henderson after an 11-month search. She will head the university's largest academic unit of 7,600 undergraduate and 2,000 graduate students.

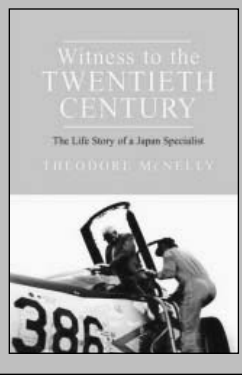

Zach P. Messitte, a foreign policy expert with a doctorate in international politics and whose experience includes working for the United Nations and CNN, was appointed executive director of the International Programs Center at the University of Oklahoma. He will also serve as vice provost for International Programs and the William J. Crowe Chair in Geopolitics. Messitte was previously the director of the Center for the Study of Democracy at St. Mary's College.

Ernest James Wilson III, a noted public broadcasting authority and scholar on international communication issues, will succeed Geoffrey Cowan as dean of the Annenberg School for Communication. Wilson is a Pacific Council Fellow and has worked at senior levels with a wide array of major organizations, including the White House, Council on Foreign Relations, the World Bank, United Nations, Ford Foundation, U.S. Information Agency, Congressional Black Caucus and the Global Information Infrastructure Commission. Wilson is also the ranking senior member of the board of directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Theodore McNelly, professor emeritus, University of Maryland, College Park, was featured in a "Personality Profile" article in the April 28 issue of The Japan Times. McNelly is the author of Witness to the Twentieth Century (2006), a memoir of his life in Japan under Allied occupation, teaching political science at U.S. military bases in Europe and Asia, studying at Columbia University in the 1950s, and research on constitutional reform in Japan. He is also the author of The Origins of Japan's Democratic Constitution (2000).

Aleksandra Sznajder, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Richmond.

Jonathan Rodden, associate professor, department of political science, Stanford University.

Terri Towner, assistant professor, department of political science, Oakland University.

Erik Wibbels, associate professor, department of political science, Duke University.

Graham Wilson, professor, department of political science, Boston University.

Julian E. Zelizer, professor of history and public affairs, Princeton University.

Promotions

M. Kent Bolton, professor, political science department, California State University, San Marcos.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Dr. Stéphane La Branche of the Institute of Political Studies in Grenoble, France, won the epsNet Innovative Teaching Award 2007.

In 2006, the European Political Science Network established the epsNet Innovative Teaching Award to support epsNet's objectives. This award is given for remarkable and/or outstanding innovation in teaching political science. Assuming that higher education is changing dramatically, either by political decision or by technological development, epsNet has been interested in innovative services or products for the profession, such as syllabi, ICT software, handbooks, course outlines, exchanges, simulations, etc. Collegium Civitas in Warsaw offered to support this Award with an endowment of 3,000 euros, which included travel expenses to the epsNet conference.

The jury was chaired by Dr. Bob Reinalda from the Radbould University Nijmegen and the award was handed over during the epsNet annual conference that took place in Ljubljana, Slovenia, in June 2007.

The winner uses ICT and simulation in an international relations class and in academic papers and articles. In his in-class practical experiments students study real events and take part in role playing. His work includes theoretical reflections on pedagogy in political science, in which he shows clear descriptions of his aims, reflecting the needs of students and the department, relevant methods and an awareness of the whole process of teaching and learning.

International Dissertation Research Fellowship 2007

The Social Science Research Council in partnership with the American Council of Learned Societies is proud to announce the recipients of the 2007 International Dissertation Research Fellowship (IDRF). The 52 fellows were selected from a very competitive pool of 1,153 applications. The 2007 IDRF fellows conducting dissertation research in the discipline of political science are:

Jonah Schulhofer-Wohl, Yale University: "Dynamics of Civil Wars."

Tariq Thachil, Cornell University: "The Saffron Wave Meets the Silent Revolution: Poor People's Hindu Nationalism in India."

Sarah Zukerman, Massachusetts Institute of Technology: "Achieving Post-War Peace: The Internal Politics of Colombia's Demilitarizing Rebel and Paramilitary Groups."

The IDRF program supports full-time graduate students in the humanities and social sciences, enrolled in doctoral programs in the United States, who are conducting dissertation research outside the United States. Seventy-five fellowships of approximately $20,000 will be awarded in 2008 with funds provided by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Further information about deadlines, application procedures, selection criteria and recently funded projects can be found online at http://programs.ssrc.org/idrf.

Eileen Hunt Botting, Thomas J. and Robert T. Rolfs Associate Professor, department of political science, University of Notre Dame.

David A. Dulio, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Oakland University.

Christopher Gelpi, professor, department of political science, Duke University.

Terrence Guay, clinical associate professor of international business, Smeal College of Business, Pennsylvania State University.

Kerstin Hamann, professor, department of political science, University of Central Florida.

Diana Hoffman, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Northern Iowa.

Shaohua Hu, associate professor with tenure, department of government and politics, Wagner College.

Simon Jackman, professor, department of political science, Stanford University.

Pierre Landry, associate professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Janice Bially Mattern, associate professor with tenure, department of international relations, Lehigh University.

B. Rick Mayes, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Richmond.

James Mittelman, university professor, School of International Service, American University.

Robert Reich, associate professor, department of political science, Stanford University.

David Rohde, Ernestine Friedl Professor, department of political science, Duke University.

Nicholas Sambanis, professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Kyle L. Saunders, associate professor, department of political science, Colorado State University.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Niambi Carter, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Duke University.

Jason Casellas, postdoctoral fellow, Center for the Study of Race, Ethnicity, and Gender in the Social Sciences, Duke University.

Jean-Francois Godbout, research fellow, Political Institutions and Public Choice Program, department of political science, Duke University.

Robert W. Hoyer, visiting associate professor, department of political science, Duke University.

Galen Irwin, visiting professor, department of political science, Duke University.

J. Wesley Leckrone, assistant professor, department of government and Politics, Widener University.

Awards

Shannon Lindsey Blanton, associate professor and chair, department of political science, University of Memphis, received the Alumni Association Distinguished Research in the Social Sciences and Business Award from the University's Alumni Association and Office of the Vice Provost for Research.

Terry Karl, Stanford University, received the Roland Prize for engaging and involving students in integrating academic scholarship with significant volunteer service to society.

Beatriz Magaloni, Stanford University, is a co-recipient of the Leon D. Epstein Book Award for the best book on political organizations and parties for Voting for Autocracy. She is also a co-recipient of the Leon D. Epstein Book Award for the best book on democratization for Voting for Autocracy.

Barry G. Rabe, professor, Gerald Ford School of Public Policy and School of Natural Resources and Environment, University of Michigan, was named a recipient of a Climate Protection Award from the Environmental Protection Agency.

David L. Richards, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Memphis, received the Early Career Research Award from the University's College of Arts and Sciences.

Jonathan Rodden, Stanford University, received the Luebbert Award for the best book on comparative politics for Hamilton's Paradox.

Brian Schaffner, assistant professor, department of government, American University, received the School of Public Affairs "Award for Outstanding Scholarship, Research, and other Professional Contributions."

David Weaver, Roy W. Howard Research Professor, School of Journalism, Indiana University, has received the 2007 Sigma Delta Chi Award for Research About Journalism (with colleagues Randal Beam, Bonnie Brownlee, Paul Voakes, and G. Cleveland Wilhoit) for the 2007 book, The American Journalist in the 21st Century (Erlbaum, 2007).

Jeremy Weinstein, Stanford University, received the Luebbert Award for the best article on comparative politics for "Handling and Manhandling Civilians in Civil War," published in the APSR in 2006 (coauthored with Macartan Humphreys).

Retirements

Ralph Maughan, professor, department of political science, Idaho State University.

Jeremy Curtoys, professor, department of political science, Tarleton State University.

American Academy of Arts & Sciences' 2007 Member Class

Political Science, International Relations, and Public Policy Section

Stephen D. Ansolabehere
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Robert S. Erikson
Columbia University

Arthur Lupia
University of Michigan

Richard G. Niemi
University of Rochester

Frances M. Rosenbluth
Yale University

James M. Snyder
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

John L. Sullivan
University of Minnesota

John Waterbury
American University of Beirut

Margaret Weir
University of California, Berkeley

Horowitz Foundation Grant Winners

The Horowitz Foundation for Social Policy provides grant funding in the major areas of the social sciences for scholars throughout the world who are in the initial phases of their research career. For more information on the Horowitz Foundation awards, visit www.horowitz-foundation.org. Following are the 2006 grant recipients who are political scientists and the work for which they received funding.

Blake C. Andrew, McGill University, political science
Media Shortcuts: The Supply and Demand of Political Information

Alexandra Gillies, University of Cambridge, social and political sciences
Governance Reform in Africa's Oil Sector

Maria Agustina Giraudy, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, political science
Undemocratic Regimes after Democratization: Argentina and Mexico

Serena Laws, University of Minnesota at Minneapolis, political science
Medical Debt, Legal Access, and Citizenship in the United States

Jennifer F. Lieb, Princeton University, politics
Representation of Undocumented Immigrants in Democracies

Yuksel Sezgin, University of Washington, department of political science
Utilizing Religious Law as a Means of Progressing Human Rights in Illiberal Politics

Amy Melissa Widestrom, Syracuse University, department of political science
Economic Inequality: Its Spatial Concentration and Voter Participation

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Canadian Political Science Association Announces Award Winners

The Canadian Political Science Association's (CPSA) Board of Directors recently announced the following as the 2007 winners of the Vincent Lemieux Prize, the John McMenemy Prize, the Donald Smiley Prize, the Jill Vickers Prize, and the Conference Poster Prize:

The Vincent Lemieux Prize

Best Ph.D. thesis submitted at a Canadian university, in 2005 or 2006, in English or in French, in any sub-field of political science.

Ellen Gutterman, University of Toronto
"On Corruption and Compliance: Explaining State Compliance with the 1997 OECD Anti-Bribery Convention."

The John McMenemy Prize

Best article, in English or French, published in volume 39 of the Canadian Journal of Political Science.

Pascale Dufour, Université de Montréal
"Projet national et espace de protestation mondiale: des articulations distinctes au Québec et au Canada." Volume 39, Issue 2.

The Donald Smiley Prize

Best book published in 2006, in English or French, in a field relating to the study of government and politics in Canada.

Garth Stevenson, Brock University
Parallel Paths: The Development of Nationalism in Ireland and Quebec (Montreal & Kingston: McGill-Queen's University Press)

The Jill Vickers Prize

Best paper presented, in English or French, at the 2006 conference of the Canadian Political Science Association on the topic of gender and politics.

Paul Kershaw, University of British Columbia
"Changing the Subject: Violence, Care and (In)Active Male Citizenship."

Conference Poster Prize

Best Poster presented at the CPSA conference to accommodate work that relies heavily on tables/graphs/figures, or work that is still at a conceptual stage.

Paul Fairie, University of Calgary
"God Only Knows: The Canadian Catholic Voter in Comparitive Context."

The 2008 award competitions were announced in September. Please see the CPSA web site for details: www.cpsa-acsp.ca/template_e.cfm?folder=prizes.

Center for the Study of Democratic Politics Visiting Fellows

The Center for the Study of Democratic Politics in Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs has five visiting fellows in residence for the 2007–2008 academic year. The scholars and their program of study:

Dinissa Duvanova, assistant professor, political science department, State University of New York, Buffalo, is involved in two research projects: the quantitative analysis of China's domestic market integration (in collaboration with Mary Cooper) and an investigation of theoretical issues surrounding civil service reforms in Eastern Europe (with Katja Michalak).

Rodney E. Hero, Packey J. Dee Professor of American Democracy, department of political science, University of Notre Dame, studies U.S. democracy and politics, especially as viewed through the analytical lenses of Latino and ethnic/minority politics, state/urban politics, and federalism. He also served as a vice president of the American Political Science Association (2003–2004).

Thomas Sattler, Ph.D. recipient, the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology (ETH), is studying the impact of international economic integration on political accountability in different economic policy areas.

Ismail K. White, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University, is researching the effects of racial cues on political evaluations, an investigation into the racial origins and consequences of felony disenfranchisement provisions, and Americans' beliefs about the genetic origins of race and gender.

Cesar Zucco Jr., Ph.D. candidate, political science department, University of California, Los Angeles, is completing his dissertation that examines how Latin American presidents use their ample control over state resources to obtain political support in multiparty legislatures, and shows the effects of both ideology and the exchange of pork and patronage for support in presidential coalition building.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press

In the News . . .

Paula McClain, Duke University, Wall Street Journal, on Barack Obama's challenge to appeal to Hispanic voters in the primaries.

Alan I. Abramowitz, Emory University, Boston Globe, speculating on the Democrats opportunity to criticize the Bush Administration's policies as the mortgage crisis worsens.

Eduardo Gamarra, Florida International University, Los Angeles Times, on Bolivia's resiliency to withstand political instability.

James Thurber, American University, Washington Post, on the lobbyist activity surrounding the proposed Sirius and XM Satellite Radio merger.

Alexander Lamis, Case Western Reserve University, Washington Post, on politicians paying attention to grassroots groups.

David Fleischer, University of Brasilia, Los Angeles Times, critiquing the Brazillian government's failure to prevent July's plane crash less than a year after another accident.

Merle Black, Emory University, Boston Globe, explaining that Rudy Giuliani's September 11 experience increases his appeal with Southern voters despite his abortion stance.

Scott Page, University of Michigan, Boston Globe, expressing surprise at Robert Putnam's study on diversity's negative effect on civic life.

John Green, University of Akron, Tuscaloosa News, explaining Mitt Romney's challenge in winning votes in the South, where 30% of evangelicals are skeptical about voting for a Mormon.

Earl Black, Rice University, Houston Chronicle, commenting on Karl Rove's departure from the White House.

Kathryn Pearson, University of Minnesota, Star Tribune, on President Bush's role in fundraising for Republican candidates.

Tony Stewart, North Idaho College, Spokesman Review, responding to the Hindu prayer that opened Congress in terms of freedom of religion in the Constitution.

Martha Kumar, Towson University, Austin-American Statesman, on how Karl Rove's departure from the White House will facilitate bipartisanship.

Metin Heper, Bilkent University, Radio Netherlands, on the influence of the army in the Turkish presidential race.

Marc Lynch, George Washington University, Christian Science Monitor, discussing the failure of the emergency political summit of Iraq's leaders.

Jennifer Lawless, Brown University, Wall Street Journal, on the dwindling number of women in elected office.

David Woodard, Clemson University, New Yorker, commenting on Rudy Giuliani's chances in the Republican South.

Alexander Lamis, Case Western Reserve University, MSNBC, on grassroots activism among middle-aged women.

Ron Walters, University of Maryland, USA Today, commenting on the roles of "buyer's remorse" and the Iraq War in the 2008 election.

Peverill Squire, University of Iowa, Boston Globe, on the special-interest fundraising of Obama's campaign.

William Boone, Clark Atlanta University, Atlanta-Journal Constitution, commenting on the racial politics of Atlanta's Grady Memorial Hospital.

David Rebovich, Rider University, Forbes, commenting on the appointment of three former Goldman Sachs executive to top positions within the New Jersey governor's office.

Desiree Pedescleaux, Spelman College, Black America News, responding to criticism that black political scientists were not being asked to comment on black political candidates.

Matthew Crenson, Johns Hopkins University, ABC2News, commenting on the television ads of the frontrunners in Baltimore's mayoral race.

David Redlawsk, University of Iowa, Los Angeles Times, discussing Barack Obama's fundraising techniques.

Bruce Buchanan, University of Texas, ABC News, on Southeast Texas Congressman Ron Paul's chances at winning the 2008 GOP nomination.

Jeff Walz, Concordia University, MSNBC, on his experimental congressional campaign with fellow professor James Burkee to defeat incumbent U.S. Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner.

John Pitney, Claremont McKenna College, USA Today, comments on the role of humor in presidential campaigns.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Booklist: Upcoming Publications in the Political Science Discipline

This section lists upcoming book publications across the broad field of political science. This list is fully reader-generated. If your first-edition book is scheduled for publication in the three months before publication of the next issue of PS (i.e., if it will be published in the July, August, or September months that lay between publication of PS's July and October issues), enter the details of publication in the box found at PS's web site: www.apsanet.org/section_223.cfm. We hope that spreading word of upcoming work will help keep our members even more attune to new scholarship within the discipline.

Champions for Peace: Women Winners of the Nobel Peace Prize
Judith Stiehm
Rowman and Littlefield

Conflict and Peace Building in Divided Societies: Responses to Ethnic Violence
Anthony Oberschall
Routledge

Cooperating Rivals: The Riparian Politics of the Jordan River Basin
Jeffrey Sosland
SUNY Press

Creating Competitive Markets: The Politics of Regulatory Reform
Edited by Marc K. Landy, Martin A. Levin, and Martin Shapiro
Brookings Institution Press

Democratic Praxis in Slovenia
Marjan Brezovsek, Miro Hacek, and Milan Zver
West Bohemia University and Ales Cenek Publishing House, Czech Republic

Eckhardt: There Once Was a Congressman from Texas
Gary A. Keith
Foreword by Al Gore
University of Texas Press

Human Rights and Structural Adjustment: The Impact of the IMF and World Bank
M. Rodwan Abouharb and David Cingranelli
Cambridge University Press

Information Communication Technologies and Human Development: Opportunities and Challenges
Edited by Mila Gascó, Fran Equiza, and Manuel Acevedo
Idea Group Publishing

Latin America Online: Cases, Successes, and Pitfalls
Edited by Mila Gascó
IGI

Melancholic Freedom: Agency and the Spirit of Politics
David Kyuman Kim
Oxford University Press

Men Speak Out: Views on Gender, Sex, and Power
Edited by Shira Tarrant
Routledge

Money Politics in Japan: New Rules, Old Practices
Matthew Carlson
Lynne Rienner Publishing

Mothers, Monsters, and Whores: Women's Violence in Global Politics
Laura Sjoberg and Caron Gentry
Zed Publishing

Popular Delusions: How Social Conformity Molds Society and Politics
Stephen Coleman
Cambria Press

Populist Radical Right Parties in Europe
Cas Mudde
Cambridge University Press

Race, Religion, and Economic Change in the Republican South
Matthew Corrigan
University Press of Florida

Rules and Restraint: Government Spending and the Design of Institutions
David M. Primo
University of Chicago Press

Second-Term Blues: How George W. Bush Has Governed
Edited by John C. Fortier and Norman J. Ornstein
Brookings Institution Press

States of Global Insecurity: Policy, Politics and Society
Daniel Béland
Worth Publishers

Spheres of Governance: Comparative Studies of Cities in Multilevel Governance Systems
Edited by Harvey Lazar and Christian Leuprecht
McGill-Queen's University Press

Understanding Principles of Politics and the State, Revised Edition
John J Schrems
University Press of America

When the State No Longer Kills: International Human Rights Norms and Abolition of Capital Punishment
Sangmin Bae
SUNY Press

The Greening of the U.S. Military: Environmental Policy, National Security, and Organizational Change
Robert F. Durant
Georgetown University Press

In The Greening of the U.S. Military, Robert F. Durant delves into this too-little understood world of defense environmental policy to uncover the epic and ongoing struggle to build an environmentally sensitive culture within the post-Cold War military. Through over 100 interviews and thousands of pages of documents, reports, and trade newsletter accounts, he offers a telling tale of political, bureaucratic, and intergovernmental combat over the pace, scope, and methods of applying environmental and natural resource laws while ensuring military readiness. He then discerns from these clashes over principle, competing values, and narrow self-interest a theoretical framework for studying and understanding organizational change in public organizations.

Robert F. Durant is professor of public administration and policy at American University.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096507071284 Published online by Cambridge University Press