Contributors

HUGH GRAHAM is Holland N. McTyeire Professor of History and Professor of Political Science at Vanderbilt University. His books include The Civil Rights Era: Origins and Development of National Policy, 1960–1972 (1990), as well as fourteen other monographs and edited books.

KEITH D. REVELL received his Ph.D. in American history from the University of Virginia. He currently teaches in the Public Administration program at Florida International University.

CHRISTOPHER SHANNON is the author of Conspicuous Criticism: Tradition, the Individual, and Culture in American Social Thought (1996). He received his doctorate in American Studies from Yale University and currently is doing postgraduate work at the Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism at the University of Notre Dame.

ANDREW A. WORKMAN, who received his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina, is an associate professor of History at Mills College. His most recent publications include an article on the National Association of Manufacturers during World War II for Business History Review. He is currently revising a book-length manuscript on the National War Labor Board.

https://doi.org/10.1353/jph.2000.0010 Published online by Cambridge University Press