Contributors

Gregory Michael Dorr was most recently visiting professor in the Department of Law, Jurisprudence, and Social Thought at Amherst College. His book, Segregation's Science: Eugenics and Society in Virginia, appeared in 2008. His article, "Defective or Disabled?: Race, Medicine, and Eugenics in Progressive Era Virginia and Alabama," Oct. 2006 (vol. 5, no. 4), won the first SHGAPE prize for articles in this journal.

Joseph M. Gabriel is assistant professor of medical humanities at the College of Medicine, Florida State University. He is currently writing a book on the cultural history of drug addiction and narcotics control.

Adam J. Hodges is associate professor of history at the University of Houston—Clear Lake. He has published articles in the Journal of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era, Oregon Historical Quarterly, Pacific Northwest Quarterly, and Planning Perspectives and is completing a book titled World War I and Urban Order: The Local Class Politics of National Mobilization.

J. I. Little is professor of history at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia. His most recent book is Loyalties in Conflict: A Canadian Borderland in War and Rebellion, 1812–1840 (2008). His current research focuses on Canadian landscape and tourism history.

Tom Phillips is an independent scholar and coauthor, with William A. Dobak, of The Black Regulars, 1866–1898 (2001).

Charles Postel is assistant professor of history at San Francisco State University. His book, The Populist Vision (2007), won the 2008 Bancroft Prize and the 2008 Frederick Jackson Turner Award of the Organization of American Historians and was honorable mention for the 2009 Vincent P. DeSantis Book Prize of the Society for Historians of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era.

Andrea Smalley teaches at Northern Illinois University. Her articles on gender and hunting have appeared in this journal as well as in Gender and History. She is writing a book tentatively titled The Liberty of Killing a Deer.

Michael Taylor holds graduate degrees in history and library science from Indiana University and is currently a special collections curator at Louisiana State University. His research interests include the relationship between transportation technology and the dissemination of information and ideas. A previous article on cycling, "The Bicycle Boom and the Bicycle Bloc: Cycling and Politics in the 1890s," appeared in the September 2008 issue of the Indiana Magazine of History.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400004059 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Jonathan Zimmerman is professor of education and history at the Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development at New York University. He also holds a position in the Department of History in NYU's Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. His most recent books are Innocents Abroad: American Teachers in the American Century (2006) and Small Wonder: The Little Red Schoolhouse in History and Memory (2009).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400004059 Published online by Cambridge University Press