Notes on Contributors

Gianmarco Bresadola Banchelli completed a doctorate in contemporary history at the University of Bologna, where he now has a post-doctoral scholarship. The subject of his thesis was Nazi-occupied Italy, specifically the Nazi civil administration in Trieste and the Adriatisches Küstenland. His current research interests are in the institutions and culture of leisure in Republican Italy.

Martin Conway is the joint team leader, with Peter Romijn and Pierre Ayçoberry, of the project on 'Political Legitimacy in Europe 1939–1949' within the European Science Foundation programme, 'The Impact of National Socialist and Fascist Rule in Europe'. He is Fellow and Tutor in Modern History at Balliol College, Oxford, has written extensively on the history of Belgium, political Catholicism and democracy in twentieth-century Europe, and is currently working on a history of Belgium after 1944.

Roumen Daskalov is Associate Professor of History at the Central European University, Budapest. His research interests span the history of south-eastern Europe, in particular the social and cultural history of Bulgaria. His The Making of a Nation in the Balkans: Historiography of the Bulgarian Revival was published in 2004.

Benjamin Frommer is Assistant Professor of History at Northwestern University. His first book, National Cleansing: Retribution against Nazi Collaborators in Postwar Czechoslovakia, will be published in autumn 2004.

Michael S. Neiberg is Professor of History at the United States Air Force Academy. He is the author of four books, most recently Warfare and Society in Europe, 1898 to the Present (2004). He is currently completing his fifth book, a one-volume history of the Great War entitled Fighting the Great War: A Global History.

Xosé-Manoel Núñez gained his Ph.D. from the European University Institute, Florence, and now lectures in modern history at the University of Santiago de Compostela. His principal research interests relate to the comparative history of nationalist movements and national and regional identities, as well as to the study of overseas migration. His most recent publications include Entre Ginebra y Berlín: la cuestión de las minorías nacionales y la política internacional de Europa (2001) and O inmigrante imaxinario (2002). He is currently working on the history and memory of the Spanish Blue Division, and its experience on the Eastern Front, 1941–4.

Contemporary European History, 13, 4 (2004), pp. 537–538 © 2004 Cambridge University Press
DOI: 10.1017/S096077730400195X Printed in the United Kingdom

https://doi.org/10.1017/S096077730400195X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Denis Peschanski is a CNRS Senior Research Associate at the Centre for Twentieth-Century Social History in Paris. He is a specialist in the history of France during the Second World War (notably Vichy, the Resistance and Holocaust studies) and in historical methodology (archives and the social and public role of historians) as well as in the history of the police and of French communism. He has published nearly twenty books and seventy articles during his career. His books include Vichy 1940–1944: Contrôle et exclusions (1997), La France des camps. L'internement 1938–1946 (2002), and Des étrangers dans la Résistance (2002), and he is the co-editor of Polices et pouvoirs au XXe siècle. Europe, Etats-Unis, Japon (2000). He is a member of the scientific council of the CNRS.

Mark Pittaway is Lecturer in European Studies in the Department of History at the Open University (United Kingdom). He works on the history of twentieth-century Hungary, particularly on the relationship between industrial workers and the socialist state in the immediate postwar period and on the history of the country's western borderland. He is the author of Eastern Europe, 1939–2000 (2004).

Peter Romijn is the joint team leader, with Martin Conway and Pierre Ayçoberry, of the project on 'Political Legitimacy in Europe 1939–1949' within the European Science Foundation programme, 'The Impact of National Socialist and Fascist Rule in Europe'. He is Head of Research at the Netherlands Institute for War Documentation, Amsterdam, and Professor of Twentieth-Century History at the University of Amsterdam. He has written on the politics of postwar purges in the Netherlands and the history of the Jews in the Netherlands, and is currently preparing a monograph on the Nazification of local government in the occupied Netherlands.

Ludovic Tournès is maître de conférences at Rouen University. A specialist in Franco-American cultural relations, his publications include New Orleans sur Seine. Histoire du jazz en France (1999). He is currently working on a study of the Rockefeller Foundation in France from 1920 to 1960, and, in collaboration with the Bibliothèque Nationale de France, co-ordinates a research group on the history of the gramophone record.

Nico Wouters defended his doctoral thesis on mayors in Belgium, the Netherlands and the north of France in 1940–5 at Ghent University in March 2004. A book about the Belgian case was published in Dutch in 2004. He is currently a researcher at the Centre for Historical Research and Documentation on War and Contemporary Society, Brussels, working on a government-funded project on the responsibility of the Belgian administration in the persecution of the Jews during the Occupation.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S096077730400195X Published online by Cambridge University Press