Terms in Systemic Linguistics
A Guide to Halliday
Alex de Joia and Adrian Stenton
Foreword by Michael Halliday

An essential source for all linguists, Terms in Systemic Linguistics charts the progress of and serves as a reference guide to developments in systemic linguistic theory over the past two decades. Consisting of a compilation of citations from the writings of Michael Halliday, the book is organized to provide the reader with ready access to the central concepts in this body of theory as well as related themes from outside systemic thought, and with an overview of the course of development of systemic thought.

1980 ISBN 0-312-79180-1 about 160 pages, cloth $14.95

Adult-Child Conversation
Studies in Structure and Process
edited by Peter French and Margaret MacLure

This book explores the different analytical approaches employed by sociologists and linguists in studying the dynamics of adult-child conversation. The nineteen papers that make up the volume—all published here for the first time—include considerations from such diverse perspectives as the social-interactionist and the ethnomethodological from sociology, and, from linguistics, the normative-structuralist, system and category approaches. An important contribution to the literature on adult-child conversation, the book serves to elucidate crucial differences and similarities between perspectives that until now have been poorly articulated.

December ISBN 0-312-00515-6 about 288 pages, cloth $27.50

The Verbal Games of Pre-School Children
Susan Grohs Iwamura

Based on extensive and detailed observation of the verbal interaction of two pre-school children, this study offers far-reaching conclusions on the manner in which all children determine the role of language in their lives. Instead of viewing them as mechanical learners of grammatical structures, the author sees children as active agents in the language-acquisition process. Iwamura shows that through the use of games of communication and invention, the child discovers the rules of usage as well as those of grammar.

An Introduction to the Philosophy of Language
Bernard Harrison

In a systematic and critical discussion of the conflicting doctrines about linguistics and the meaning of language, this book provides a synthesis of the various strands of philosophical linguistic theory. Among the topics explored are names and sentences, the relationship between meaning and truth, communication and invention, formal and natural languages, verification, universality and meaning, and sense and the publicity of sense.

English for Cross-Cultural Communication
edited by Larry E. Smith

This volume, the result of a conference sponsored by the East-West Culture Learning Institute in Hawaii, marks a major stage in the evolution of English language study and teaching. Addressing key questions about the use of English as a foreign or second language, the contributors offer path-breaking conclusions regarding issues in socio-linguistics, descriptive linguistics and language education policies.

Language and Linguistic Area

Essays by Murray B. Emeneau

Selected and Edited by Anwar S. Dil. Fifteen essays by the eminent linguist and authority on Dravidian and Indo-Aryan languages and cultures, Murray B. Emeneau. They represent over forty years of important work in developing the concept of a linguistic area. Part I presents four general essays on language and linguistic area, featuring a new essay written especially for this volume, "Linguistic Area: Introduction and Continuation." Part II contains seven of the author's most significant papers on India as a linguistic area. Part III includes four of his landmark studies of the Brahui language of present-day Pakistan. Language Science and National Development series. $15.00

Language and Cultural Description

Essays by Charles O. Frake

Selected and Edited by Anwar S. Dil. This is a collection of seventeen major essays by a leading anthropologist well known for his pioneering work in ethnoscience and componential analysis. Based on years of fieldwork among various culture groups in the Philippines, the author has developed a unique methodological repertoire to probe the questions members of a culture ask in categorizing their outlook and experience. Part I includes papers that show the growth of the author's methodological concerns. The remaining three parts represent the author's field investigations among the Subanun, the Yakan, and the Zamboanga and Sulu peoples. Language Science and National Development series. $17.50

Symbol as Sense

New Approaches to the Analysis of Meaning

Edited by MARY LeCRON FOSTER and STANLEY H. BRANDES

A Volume in the LANGUAGE, THOUGHT, AND CULTURE Series

Using the uniquely human function of symbolization as its focus and point of departure, Symbol as Sense presents a novel, integrative approach to the dynamics of human activity. The book emphasizes process—specifically, the integration of symbols in a developmental and evolutionary as well as a ritual sense. The volume consists of 16 original essays written from various disciplinary standpoints concerned with language, behavior, and biology. In addition, seven editorial chapters unify the information and aid in formulating an integrative model of the nature of symbolization. The contributors examine five major areas: the relationship among emotions, rationality, and symbolization; the ways in which symbols perpetuate the social order; the connection between human and nonhuman primate biological constitution, on the one hand, and the development of the symbolic capacity, on the other; the interaction between technology—from prehistoric times to the present—and human symbolization; the transformation of symbolic forms and cultural structures through time. A concluding chapter explores how these issues may lead to an understanding of symbolic universals.

Language Production VOLUME 1

Edited by B. BUTTERWORTH

Language production is a subject that crosses many disciplinary frontiers. A proper understanding of the processes involved in speech and talk demands a knowledge which ranges from the sociology of talk in its social setting, through the psychology of mental operations to the physiology of the vocal musculature. The investigative methods employed are similarly varied. The traditional techniques of psychology, linguistics and phonetics are supplemented, for example, by analyses of hesitation and slips, by the study of pathological breakdown of language in aphasia, by computer simulations of intelligent conversationalists, by analysis of the performance of simultaneous translators and by the analysis of nonverbal activity during talk. Volume 1 of Language Production brings these approaches together for the first time in a single work.

PUBLICATIONS

of the

Linguistic Society of America

LANGUAGE, the journal of the Linguistic Society of America, carries technical articles dealing with problems of linguistic science, reviews of recently published linguistic works, and notes of interest to professional linguists.

As supplements to LANGUAGE, the Linguistic Society of America issues a series of occasional publications, LANGUAGE MONOGRAPHS. These are included in the subscription price of the journal, but may also be purchased separately. In the LANGUAGE MONOGRAPH series, the Society publishes independently subsidized studies which are too long to appear as articles or are otherwise unsuitable for publication in the journal. The method of application for admission to this series of supplements, and the terms of publication, may be secured from the Secretary of the Society.

SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS in the field of linguistic science are issued by the Society from time to time. These are not included in the subscription price of the journal.

MEETING HANDBOOKS, which contain program listings and abstracts of papers presented at LSA Annual Meetings, 1965 through 1973, may be purchased separately.

A list of publications in print and a price list are available from the LSA Secretariat, 3520 Prospect Street NW, Washington, DC 20007. Reprint editions and back copies may be ordered from Kraus Reprint Corporation, Route 100, Millwood, New York 10546, or FL-9491 Nendeln, Liechtenstein, Europe. Prices for specific issues and/or volumes may be obtained from those addresses.
