Journal of the Royal Musical Association, 150.1, 317–318
doi:10.1017/rma.2025.10036

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contributors

Marina Alonso-Bolaños (cenizadevolcan@gmail.com) is Research Professor at the National Institute of Anthropology and History in Mexico, with a PhD in History from El Colegio de México. Her research explores the anthropology of art, ethnography of Mesoamerican Indigenous peoples, and Indigenous world views and beliefs. Publications include 'Applied Ethnomusicology: A Critical History of Indigenous Music Studies in Mexico', in A Latin American Music Reader: Views from the South (University of Illinois Press, 2016) and 'Indigenous Cultural Expressions and Methodological Frameworks: Some Thoughts', in Indigenous and Minority Populations (IntechOpen, 2023) <http://doi.org/10.5772/intechopen.106236>.

Adam Behan (adam.behan@mu.ie) is currently a Government of Ireland Postdoctoral Fellow at Maynooth University. He works primarily on western music in the twentieth century, and is broadly interested in recordings and cultural history. His research has been published in journals such as Music Analysis, Twentieth-Century Music, Music & Letters, and the Journal of the Society for American Music, and has won awards including the Karl Geiringer Scholarship from the American Brahms Society and the Westrup Prize from the Music & Letters Trust.

Brian Fairley (brf154@pitt.edu) is a Postdoctoral Fellow in Music and History at the Center for Russian, East European, and Eurasian Studies at the University of Pittsburgh. His research explores Georgian traditional singing, the history of multichannel sound recording, and concepts of polyphony from ethnographic and literary theory. His articles have appeared in the Journal of Sonic Studies, Theoria: Historical Aspects of Music Theory, and Ethnomusicology.

John Gabriel (john.gabriel@unimelb.edu.au) is Senior Lecturer in Musicology at the University of Melbourne. His research focuses on, but is by no means limited to, German- and Czech-speaking Central Europe from the fin-de-siècle to the early Cold War. Recent publications include articles on interwar German radio music theatre, operatic representations of China, the aesthetics of the New Objectivity, and Elliott Carter, as well as the volume Australasian Music at Home and Abroad, co-edited with Sarah Kirby (Australian Scholarly Publishing, 2023).

Lisa Gitelman (lg91@nyu.edu) is Professor of English and of Media, Culture, and Communication at New York University. She works at the intersections of textual and media studies and has published extensively on early recorded sound. Her most recent book is Paper Knowledge: Toward a Media History of Documents (Duke University Press, 2014).

Rosemary Golding (rosemary.golding@open.ac.uk) is Senior Lecturer at The Open University, where she has taught since 2009. Her research interests centre on the social history of music in nineteenth-century Britain, including music education, the music profession, and the relationships between music, health, and wellbeing. Recent projects include her edited four-volume documentary history Music in Nineteenth-Century Britain (Routledge, 2022), a monograph Music and Moral Management in the Nineteenth-Century English Lunatic Asylum (Palgrave Macmillan, 2021), and an AHRC-funded network on 'Psychiatry and the Arts in Nineteenth-Century Britain'.

© The Author(s), 2025. Published by Cambridge University Press on behalf of the Royal Musical Association

https://doi.org/10.1017/rma.2025.10036 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Andrew J. Green (andrew.green@kcl.ac.uk) is an anthropologist of music and sound, and Lecturer in Music at King's College London. His work explores musical and acoustic engagements with politics, activism, and the natural environment, especially the musical worlds of Mexico City and southern Mexico. He has researched and taught at the universities of Glasgow, Warsaw, and the National Autonomous University of Mexico, and has published articles in Cultural Sociology, Cultural Studies, Media, Culture & Society, Popular Music and Society, Ethnomusicology Forum, and the International Journal of Cultural Policy.

Andrew Hugill (andrewhugill@gmail.com) is a composer, musicologist, and creative technologist, and Visiting Research Professor in the Music Department, University of Leeds. His book publications include Aural Diversity (Routledge, 2022), 'Pataphysics: A Useless Guide (MIT Press, 2012), and The Digital Musician (Routledge, 2008). Recent compositions include Spectrum Sounds (2022), commissioned by the BBC and all four Arts Councils of the UK, and Thirty Minutes for Diplacusis Piano, commissioned by Arts Council England and GNResound <https://andrewhugill.com/>.

Rajan Lal (rsl34@cam.ac.uk) is a Junior Research Fellow in Music at Trinity College, Cambridge. He completed his doctoral studies at Gonville & Caius College, Cambridge, where his PhD project, supervised by Nicholas Marston, examined scalar quality in Alexander Scriabin's late works. His articles on Arnold Schoenberg and Alban Berg have appeared, respectively, in Music Theory Online and in Music Analysis; further interests include Anton Webern, Kaikhosru Sorabji, Stravinsky's 'late style', and contemporary film music.

Peng Liu (pengliu@truman.edu) is Assistant Professor of Musicology at Truman State University. His research focuses on piano music and performance culture, women musicians, and Asian American music and identity politics. Articles have appeared in The Journal of Musicology, Notes, and Journal of the Central Conservatory of Music. He has presented at national and international conferences, including annual meetings of the American Musicological Society, the International Conference on Women's Work in Music, and Sound Check! A Festival of Asian American Music, Sound, and Scholarship.

Jordan Musser (jmusser@amsmusicology.org) is Managing Editor of AMS Publications and previously served as Program Manager at the American Composers Orchestra. His primary research centres on music and politics in the twentieth century with a focus on the history and theory of the avant-garde. In addition to a doctoral dissertation completed at Cornell University, his publications include 'The Avant-Garde Is in the Audience', in Twentieth-Century Music, 16.3 (2019) and 'Carl Czerny's Mechanical Reproductions', in the Journal of the American Musicological Society, 72.2 (2019).

Piotr Wiśniewski (piotr.wisniewski@kul.pl) is Associate Professor and Head of the Department of Religious Monody and Polyphony at John Paul II Catholic University of Lublin. He researches on medieval liturgical and musical manuscripts of diocesan and monastic provenance, as well as on Gregorian and post-Gregorian liturgical monody. Recent publications include 'A Troped Marian Antiphon Salve Regina in a Fifteenth-Century Olivetan Psalter from Łódź', Collectanea Theologica, 92.4 (2022) and 'Fragments of the Liturgical-Musical Codex from the Archdiocesan Archive of Gniezno (Poland): Source Analysis and Provenance Hypotheses', Arts, 13.4, 125 (2024) <https://www.mdpi.com/2076-0752/13/4/125>.

https://doi.org/10.1017/rma.2025.10036 Published online by Cambridge University Press