Lenin

A Biography
Robert Service

"The wonder of this particular account is that Service succeeds in explaining how Lenin came to [his] determined confidence and the complex and ultimately tragic circumstances that led to the triumph of his ambitions…this book [contains a] wealth of personal information that makes Lenin a far more accessible, if not appealing, individual…Such details make Lenin all the more human and so all the more vivid and frightening."

Denazification in Soviet-Occupied Germany

Brandenburg, 1945-1948
Timothy R. Vogt

Timothy Vogt directly challenges both the "antifascist" paradigm employed by East German historians and the "sovietization" interpretive model that has dominated western studies. He argues that Soviet denazification was neither an effective purge of society nor part of a methodical "sovietization" of the eastern zone. Instead, in a detailed study, denazification is pictured as a failure, which fell short of its goals and was eventually abandoned by the frustrated Soviet and German leadership.

Fires of Hatred

Ethnic Cleansing in Twentieth-Century Europe
Norman M. Naimark

"[Naimark] imbeds ethnic cleansing in the history of 20th-century Europe…[and] undercuts the standard wisdom that holds ancient enmities responsible for atrocities perpetrated in the modern era."
—James R. Holmes, Library Journal

Reinventing Russia

Russian Nationalism and the Soviet State, 1953-1991
Yitzhak M. Brudny

"If readers think that today's anti-Western, antimarket, antisemitic variety of Russian nationalism is simply the fallout from the country's current misery, they should think again. With care and intelligence, Brudny traces its lineage back to the Khrushchev years. What began among the so-called village prose writers as a lament for a rural past ravaged by Stalin's experimentation gradually accumulated further grievances. Much of the book concentrates on how Khrushchev and Brezhnev tried—but ultimately failed—to harness this discontent for their own purposes."
