Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, all at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

TONY BANKS is a lecturer in the department of applied and international economics at Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand. He is completing a DPhil (development studies) on property rights reform in pastoral China through the University of Sussex, and has worked as a consultant on pastoral development projects in China.

MARC BLECHER is professor of politics and East Asian studies at Oberlin College. His most recent books are China Against the Tides (second edition forthcoming and recently translated into Chinese and Korean) and Tethered Deer: Government and Economy in a Chinese County (with Vivienne Shue). He is currently working on a book provisionally entitled A World to Lose: Workers' Politics and the Chinese State.

CAROLYN CARTIER is associate professor of geography at the University of Southern California. Recent publications include "Origins and evolution of a geographical idea: the macroregion in China," in Modern China, 2001; a monograph entitled Globalizing South China (2001); and an edited collection (with Laurence J. C. Ma) entitled The Chinese Diaspora: Place, Space, Mobility, and Identity (2002).

J. D. CHINNERY was lecturer in Chinese at the School of Oriental and African Studies from 1948 to 1965, and senior lecturer and head of the Chinese department at Edinburgh University from 1966 to 1989.

EVA SHAN CHOU is the author of Reconsidering Tu Fu: Literary Greatness and Cultural Context (1995). She is on the faculty of City University of New York, Baruch College.

HILARY CHUNG teaches Chinese and comparative literature at the University of Auckland, New Zealand. Her primary area of research focuses on gender and representation in the context of cultural crisis.

ANTONIA FINNANE is senior lecturer in the department of history, University of Melbourne, Australia.

JOHN GILLESPIE is an associate professor in the Law School, Deakin University, Melbourne, Australia. He teaches and researches East Asian law and specializes in law reform and legal transplantation issues.

MERLE GOLDMAN is the author of Sowing the Seeds of Democracy in China and co-author (with John K. Fairbank) of China: A New History.

STEVEN M. GOLDSTEIN is Sophia Smith Professor of Government at Smith College.

DAVID S. G. GOODMAN is director of the Institute for International Studies, University of Technology, Sydney. Recent publications include Social and Political Change in Revolutionary China; China's Communist Revolutions (with Werner Draguhn); Shanxi in Reform: Everyday Life in a North China Province; and North China at War: The Social Ecology of Revolution, 1937–1945 (with Feng Chongyi). He is currently completing Provincialism and Democracy – a study of social and political change in Shanxi province under reform.

© The China Quarterly, 2002

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000657 Published online by Cambridge University Press

JOHN B. HATTENDORF, DPhil, has been the Ernest J. King Professor of Maritime History and director of the advanced research department at the US Naval War College since 1984. The National Maritime Museum, Greenwich, recently awarded him its Caird Medal for his contributions to the study of maritime history. He is editor-in-chief of the forthcoming Oxford Encyclopaedia of Maritime History.

RUTH HAYHOE is a professor at the University of Toronto and president emeritus of the Hong Kong Institute of Education. Her recent books include Education, Culture and Identity in Twentieth Century China, co-edited with Glen Peterson and Yongling Lu (2001), and Knowledge Across Cultures: A Contribution to the Dialogue among Civilizations, co-edited with Julia Pan (2001).

CARSTEN HERRMANN-PILLATH is professor and director of the Institute for Comparative Research into Culture and Economic Systems at Witten/Herdecke University in Germany. His fields of research include Chinese economic studies, evolutionary economics and international trade. He is author and editor (together with Chen Jiyuan) of the book series Dangdai Zhongguo de cunzhuang jingji yu cunluo wenhua congshu and edits the website www.on-China.de.

PETER J. HOTEZ, MD, PhD, is professor and chair of the department of microbiology and tropical medicine, and professor of human sciences at The George Washington University in Washington, DC. He is also senior fellow of the Sabin Vaccine Institute and visiting professor of the Institute of Parasitic Diseases at the Chinese Academy of Preventive Medicine.

KATHERINE PALMER KAUP is assistant professor of political science and Asian studies at Furman University. She is author of Creating the Zhuang: Ethnic Politics in China (2000).

ANDREW KIPNIS is a fellow with a joint appointment in the department of anthropology and the Contemporary China Centre at the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies at the Australian National University.

DANIEL KIRCHERT is concluding his PhD thesis on an evolutionary approach to regional disparities in China at Witten/Herdecke University in Germany.

KUAN HSIN-CHI is professor and chairman of the department of government and public administration, and director of the Universities Service Centre, both at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

FUNG KWAN teaches economics and co-ordinates the economics programme at the University of Macau. His research interests focus on development and rural economics in China, with an emphasis on labour issues.

LAU SIU-KAI is professor and chairman of the department of sociology, and associate director of the Hong Kong Institute of Asia-Pacific Studies, both at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

PAK K. LEE is assistant professor in the School of Arts and Social Sciences at the Open University of Hong Kong. His recent publications on the political economy of China's reforms have appeared in the Journal of

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000657 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Contemporary Asia, Development Policy Review, Journal of Contemporary China and The China Quarterly.

YOK-SHIU F. LEE is associate professor in the department of geography at the University of Hong Kong.

LIU JIAFENG received his BA and MA in history from Shandong University in 1992 and 1997 respectively, and his PhD from Central China Normal University in 2001. His research focuses on the history of Chinese Christianity and the Nanjing Massacre. He is currently a lecturer in the Institute of Historical Studies, Central China Normal University, and also assistant to Zhang Kaiyuan.

QI LUO teaches at the Centre for Chinese Business and Development, University of Leeds. He has published extensively on China's foreign trade and investment policy, and economic development in various Chinese regions.

RANA MITTER is university lecturer in the history and politics of modern China at the University of Oxford. He is the author of The Manchurian Myth: Nationalism, Resistance, and Collaboration in Modern China (2000).

PAN JIANCHENG is senior statistician affiliated with the National Bureau of Statistics in Beijing. He currently works at the China Economic Monitoring Centre and is a PhD candidate at the Witten/Herdecke University in Germany.

PETER C. PERDUE is T. T. and Wei Fong Chao Professor of Asian Civilizations and professor of history at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His publications include Exhausting the Earth: State and Peasant in Hunan, 1500–1850 A.D. (1987); "Military mobilization in seventeenth and eighteenth-century China, Russia, and Mongolia," in Modern Asian Studies, 1996, and "Boundaries, maps, and movement: Chinese, Russian, and Mongolian empires in early modern central Eurasia," in International History Review, June 1998. His current interests focus on environmental changes, ethnicity, and the relationship between long-term economic change and military conquest in the Chinese and Russian empires. His forthcoming publication, entitled China Marches West: The Qing Conquest of Central Eurasia, 1600–1800, combines these perspectives into an integrated account of the Chinese and Russian conquest of Siberia and Central Eurasia in the 17th and 18th centuries.

GERARD POSTIGLIONE is series general editor of Hong Kong Becoming China and Hong Kong Culture and Society.

ALLAN RAE is head of the department of applied and international economics at Massey University, Palmerston North, New Zealand, and an agricultural economist. His research focuses on developments in agricultural and good trade and trade policy reforms, with an emphasis on the Asia-Pacific region.

SALLY SARGESON is deputy director of the Asia Research Centre at Murdoch University, Perth, Australia. She researches labour relations, property rights and rural housing in contemporary China. Her recent books include Reworking China's Proletariat (1999) and Collective Goods, Collective Futures in East and Southeast Asia (2002).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000657 Published online by Cambridge University Press

ADALBERTO TENREIRO was born in São Tomé e Príncipe in 1955. He obtained his architectural diploma in 1980 in Lisbon. He has been a practising architect in Macau since 1983 and a visiting teacher at the University of Hong Kong since 1999.

PATRICIA M. THORNTON is an assistant professor of political science at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut.

JUNG-FANG TSAI is professor of history at the University of Charleston, South Carolina. He is the author of Hong Kong in Chinese History: Community and Social Unrest in the British Colony, 1842–1913 (1993) and Xianggangren zhi Xianggangshi, 1841–1945 (2001).

TERESA WRIGHT is an associate professor of political science at California State University, Long Beach. Her research interests focus on comparative social movements and democratisation in East Asia. She has published articles in The China Quarterly and Asian Survey, as well as a book entitled The Perils of Protest: State Repression and Student Activism in China and Taiwan (2001).

HERBERT S. YEE is professor of politics and international relations at the Hong Kong Baptist University. His recent publications include Macau in Transition: From Colony to Special Autonomous Region (2001) and The China Threat: Perceptions, Myths and Reality (co-editor, 2002).

ZHANG KAIYUAN studied in the history department of Nanking University from 1946–1948. He served as president of Central China Normal University from 1984–1992. In May 1992, Augustana College conferred upon him the honorary degree of LLD. He has lectured and conducted research in many universities in the United States and around the world. Since 1980, he has devoted himself to promoting historical research on Christian colleges in China, especially the missionary group represented by his teacher, M. Searle Bates. His most recent publication is Eyewitness to Massacre: American Missionaries Bear Witness to Japanese Atrocities in Nanjing (editor, 2001).

DINGXIN ZHAO is an assistant professor of sociology at the University of Chicago. His research focuses on social movements and collection action, national and US–China relations, and comparative historical sociology. He has published articles analysing the rise and patterns of the development of the 1989 student movement in Beijing. His most recent book, Power of Tiananmen (2001), has won the American Sociological Association's Asia and Asian American 2001 Outstanding Book Award.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000657 Published online by Cambridge University Press