Contributors

Bette Anton, M.L.S., is Head Librarian for the Pamela & Kenneth Fong Optometry & Health Sciences Library of the University of California, Berkeley. This library serves the UC Berkeley School of Optometry and the UC Berkeley–UC San Francisco Joint Medical Program.

Françoise Baylis, Ph.D., is Professor and Canada Research Chair in Bioethics and Philosophy at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Canada. Her research focuses on novel technologies (in genetics and neuroscience), research involving humans, women's health, and feminist ethics with a particular interest in issues of justice, community, and identity (http://www.noveltechethics.ca).

Robert H. Blank, Ph.D., is a political scientist and Research Scholar at the New College of Florida. He previously taught biomedical policy in New Zealand and England. Among his numerous books are Brain Policy, Biology and Political Science, and End of Life Decision Making: A Comparative Study. Current research interests include neuroscience and political behavior.

Courtney S. Campbell, Ph.D., is Chair, Department of Philosophy, Oregon State University, Corvallis, Oregon.

Anjan Chatterjee, M.D., is a cognitive neurologist and cognitive neuroscientist at the University of Pennsylvania. His clinical practice focuses on patients with cognitive disorders and his research focuses on the neural bases for attention, spatial, and linguistic representations.

Lauren A. Clark, B.A., graduated in 2006 from Denison University, Granville, Ohio, where she served as a Fellow and a Teaching Assistant in the Department of Religion.

Hubert Doucet, Ph.D., is Professor of Bioethics at the Programs of Bioethics and director of GREB (Groupe de recherche en bioéthique) at the Université de Montréal. His research focuses on science, technology, bioethics, and public dialogue.

Jocelyn Downie, M.Li.H., Ph.D., is the Director of the Health Law Institute and Canada Research Chair in Health Law and Policy at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Canada.

Kathinka Evers, Ph.D., is a senior researcher in philosophy at the Centre for Bioethics at Karolinska Institutet and Uppsala University, where she directs the Cambridge Quarterly of Healthcare Ethics (2007), 16, 121–123. Printed in the USA.

Copyright © 2007 Cambridge University Press 0963-1801/07 $20.00

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0963180107070983 Published online by Cambridge University Press

research and doctoral courses in neuroethics. Her publications focus on philosophy of science, philosophy of mind, ethics in science, and neuroethics.

Andrew Fenton is a Ph.D. candidate in the Philosophy Department of the University of Calgary in Calgary, Alberta. He is also currently a part-time faculty member in the Comparative Religion Department of Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Fenton is in the process of completing his dissertation tentatively titled "Putting nature back into naturalized epistemology: Why members of the genus Pan are epistemic subjects and why this matters."

Matti Häyry, Lic.Sc.(soc), D.Sc.(soc), is Professor of Bioethics and Philosophy of Law at the Centre for Social Ethics and Policy, School of Law, The University of Manchester, United Kingdom. His main research interests include theories of moral and political philosophy and the concepts used in bioethics.

Judy Illes, Ph.D., is the Director of the Neuroethics Imaging Program and Senior Research Scholar at Stanford University, where she holds a joint appointment in the Center for Biomedical Ethics and the Department of Radiology.

Kenneth V. Iserson, M.D., M.B.A., is Professor of Surgery (Emergency Medicine), Director of the Program in Bioethics, and Chair of the Bioethics Committee at the University of Arizona College of Medicine, Tucson.

James J. Keenan, S.T.L., S.T.D., holds the Gasson Chair in the Theology Department, Boston College, Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, and is Professor of Moral Theology at Weston Jesuit School of Theology, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

David Loy, Ph.D., is the Best Family Chair, Ethics/Religion, and Society Program, Xavier University, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Jennifer Marshall, M.Sc. (Human Genetics, Bioethics), is a Research Associate at the Health Law Institute at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Canada.

Kathleen Matthews, Ph.D., is Dean of the Weiss School of Natural Sciences and Stewart Professor of Biochemistry/Cell Biology, Rice University, Houston, Texas.

Christopher Nobbs earned his (Intercalated B.Sc.) in Healthcare Ethics and Law at The University of Manchester and is currently in his fourth year at the Royal Free and University College Medical School, University College London.

Eric Racine, Ph.D., is the Director of the Neuroethics Research Unit at the Institut de Recherches Cliniques de Montreal, Canada. His current research focuses on the public understanding of neuroscience and on ethical issues in the clinical application of neurological sciences.

Jason Scott Robert, Ph.D., is Assistant Professor in the School of Life Sciences at Arizona State University, where he teaches in the Bioethics, Policy, and Law program in the Center for Biology and Society. One of Dr. Robert's current interests in bioethics and the philosophy of science is the development of novel therapeutics for brain repair.

Tuija Takala, PhD., is Lecturer in Bioethics at the Centre for Social Ethics in Policy, University of Manchester, United Kingdom, and Adjunct Professor in Practical Philosophy in the Department of Social and Moral Philosophy, University of Helsinki Finland. Her main research interest lies in the philosophical analysis of bioethical concepts.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0963180107070983 Published online by Cambridge University Press

HZ Adriaan Van der Loos is a research assistant in the Neuroethics Imaging Group in the Center for Biomedical Ethics, Stanford University, and a high school senior at Kehillah Jewish High School in Palo Alto. He hopes to study business and biochemistry in college.

Terry Winograd, Ph.D., is Professor of Computer Science, Stanford University, Stanford, California.

William J. Winslade, Ph.D., J.D., is James Wade Rockwell Professor of Philosophy in Medicine, Professor of Preventive Medicine and Community Health, and Professor of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, and Interim Director and member of the Institute for the Medical Humanities, University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, Texas. He is also Distinguished Visiting Professor of Law and Associate Director for Graduate Program and Government Affairs, University of Houston Health Law and Policy Institute, University of Houston Law Center.

Laurie S. Zoloth, Ph.D., is Professor of Medical Humanities and Bioethics, Professor of Religion, Northwestern University, Chicago, Illinois.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0963180107070983 Published online by Cambridge University Press