Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, all at SOAS, University of London.

REGINA ABRAMI is an assistant professor in the Business, Government and International Economy Unit. She joined the Harvard Business School faculty in 2001. She earned her PhD in political science at the University of California, Berkeley. Her research is broadly concerned with the political economy of development. She is currently working on a book manuscript, Economies Under Different Command: Socialist Norms, Entrepreneurship and Market Transition in Vietnam and China.

HUGH D. R. BAKER has retired from SOAS as Professor Emeritus of Chinese. He continues to do research and publish on Hong Kong society and culture, Chinese language, and Chinese customary law.

NICOLAS BECQUELIN obtained his PhD in political science from the School of Advanced Studies in Social Sciences (EHESS), Paris, in 2001, and is a graduate in Chinese from the School of Oriental Languages and Civilisations (INALCO). From 1996 to 1999 he was research fellow at the French Research Centre on Contemporary China (CEFC), Hong Kong, doing fieldwork in China in general and Xinjiang in particular. His publications have appeared in The China Journal, China Perspective as well as various newspaper and magazines. He joined the non-governmental human rights organisation Human Rights in China as Research Director in January 2002 and is based in the Hong Kong office.

CONG CAO is a research fellow at East Asian Institute, the National University of Singapore. He is the author of China's Scientific Elite (London: RoutledgeCurzon, 2004).

I-RU CHEN has a BA in political science from National Taiwan University, an MA in international political economy from University of Warwick, and is currently a PhD candidate in the department of political studies, SOAS, University of London.

PARKS M. COBLE is a professor of East Asian History at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, USA. His most recent book is Chinese Capitalists in Japan's New Order: The Occupied Lower Yangzi, 1937–1945. [Berkeley: University of California Press, 2003]

FRANK DIKÖTTER is professor of the modern history of China at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. His most recent book is Crime, Punishment and the Prison in Modern China (Columbia University Press, 2002).

ARIF DIRLIK is Knight Professor of Social Science, and Professor of History and Anthropology at the University of Oregon, Eugene.

BERNHARD FUEHRER is senior lecturer in classical Chinese philosophy and

© The China Quarterly, 2004

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000323 Published online by Cambridge University Press language, and chair of the department of the languages and cultures of China and Inner Asia, SOAS. He has published monographs on traditional Chinese poetics (1995), the history of Sinology (2001), and has edited a volume on censorship in modern and pre-modern China (Harrassowitz, 2003).

JOHN GITTINGS was China specialist for The Guardian, 1983–2003, and first visited China in 1971. He is now a research associate at the Centre for Chinese Studies, School of Oriental and African Studies.

DAVID S. G. GOODMAN is professor of international studies at the University of Technology, Sydney. His most recent publications include Social and Political Change in Revolutionary China (Rowman & Littlefield, 2000) and (with Werner Draguhn) China's Communist Revolutions (Routledge, 2002). He is currently completing a social history of Qinghai Province under the People's Republic of China.

RACHEL HARRIS is a lecturer in ethnomusicology at SOAS, teaching the musics of Central Asia and China. Her book on the music of Sibe-Manchu will be published by OUP in June 2004. Her current research specialism is Uyghur music, especially politics, recorded music, identity and change.

HEIKE HOLBIG is a research fellow at the Institute of Asian Affairs, Hamburg, working in the field of domestic politics in the PRC. She trained in Chinese studies and economics at Heidelberg University and Beijing University. Recent publications in English include (with Robert Ash) China's Accession to the World Trade Organization. National and International Perspectives (RoutledgeCurzon, 2002) and "The Party and Private Entrepreneurs in the PRC," Copenhagen Journal of Asian Studies, vol. 16 (November 2002).

JEESOON HONG is a post-doctoral research associate in the department of Sinology, JWG Universität Frankfurt. She specializes in modern Chinese literature and her PhD dissertation entitled Gendered Modernism of Republican China: Lu Yin, Ling Shuhua and Zhang Ailing was presented in the department of Chinese studies, University of Cambridge. Her article, "The Chinese gentlewoman in the public gaze: Ling Shuhua in twentieth century's China and Britain" will be published in a forthcoming volume on Perceptions of Gentility in Chinese Literature and History (Stanford University Press)

LIJIAN HONG is a senior lecturer in the Chinese studies program at Monash University, Melbourne. A native of Sichuan, he started his research career into Chinese local politics as a research fellow at the Institute of Political Science of Sichuan Academy of Social Sciences (Chengdu). After finishing his PhD at the Australian National University, he began focusing on central-local relations in post-Mao China and regional social, political and economic development in South-West China.

JOYCE K. KALLGREN is emeritus professor of political science at the University of California, Davis, research associate at the Institute of East Asian Studies (University of California, Berkeley) and chair of the U.S. Council on Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000323 Published online by Cambridge University Press

AGNES S. KU is assistant professor in sociology at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. Her research interests include cultural sociology, civil society, the public sphere, Hong Kong studies, and gender issues.

DIANA LARY is professor of modern Chinese history at the University of British Columbia. She works on the effects of war on society in China.

GREGORY B. LEE is professor of Chinese and transcultural studies at Université Jean Moulin-Lyon 3, France. His Chinas Unlimited: Making the Imaginaries of China and Chineseness is published by Routledge and Hawai'i University Press.

RALPH LITZINGER is associate professor of cultural anthropology and the director of the Asian Pacific Studies Institute at Duke. He is the author of Other Chinas: the Yao and the Politics of National Belonging (Duke Press, 2000) and a number of articles on ethnic minority culture and politics in China. He is currently completing a book on globalization and environmental activism in northwest Yunnan.

CHRISTOPHER A. MCNALLY is a research fellow in politics, governance and security at the East-West Center in Hawaii. He is a political economist focusing on the external and internal ramifications of China's transition to capitalism. His recent publications include "Strange Bedfellows: Communist Party Institutions and New Governance Mechanisms in Chinese State Holding Corporations," Business and Politics, vol. 4 (April 2002), as well as several articles in edited volumes. He is currently undertaking research on the growth of China's private sector.

TIM OAKES is associate professor of geography at the University of Colorado at Boulder. He is the author of Tourism and Modernity in China (Routledge, 1998), and, most recently, Travels in Paradox (with Claudio Minca) and Translocal China (with Louisa Schein), both forthcoming. During 2003/4 he was a visiting research scholar at the Institute for International Studies, University of Technology, Sydney.

RANDY PEERENBOOM is professor of law at the UCLA School of Law. His most recent book is China's Long March toward Rule of Law.

JOANNE N. SMITH is lecturer in Chinese at the University of Newcastle Upon Tyne. Research interests include ethnic, national and hybrid identities among the Uyghur of Xinjiang. Dr. Smith organized a multi-disciplinary panel 'Representations of Uyghur National Identity in Popular Culture and Everyday Discourse' for the 2003 Association for Asian Studies (AAS) Annual Meeting, in New York, and is co-organizing an international, inter-disciplinary conference 'Situating the Uyghurs between China and Central Asia,' to be held in London. She acts as consultant to a number of independent documentary filmmakers, news correspondents, and governmental and non-governmental organizations.

LAIXIANG SUN is chair professor of Chinese business and management at

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000323 Published online by Cambridge University Press

the department of financial and management studies, SOAS, University of London. He is also affiliated with the LUC Project at the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis in Laxenburg, Austria, and Guanghua School of Management in Peking University. During 1996–2002, he was also affiliated with the United Nations University (UNU), WIDER in Helsinki, Finland as consultant researcher, and then a project director on property rights regimes, microeconomic incentives, and development.

HANS VAN DE VEN is senior lecturer in modern Chinese history at the University of Cambridge, and researches the history of Republican China. His book From Friend to Comrade: The Founding of the Chinese Communist Party (University of California Press, 1992) won the Lilienthal Prize. He is now working on Chinese military history.

EDUARD B. VERMEER is a senior lecturer in modern history of China at the Sinological Institute, Leiden University. He has written on socio-economic history, local economic development, rural surveys and environmental problems in China. He is the author of Economic Development in Provincial China: The Central Shaanxi Since 1930 and recently co-edited China's Legal Reforms and Their Political Limits and Cooperative and Collective in China's Rural Development: Between State and Private Interests.

DAVID DER-WEI WANG is Dean Lung Professor of Chinese Studies at Columbia University. His most recent works include Fin-de Siècle Splendor: Repressed Modernities of Late Qing Fiction (1997) and The Monster That Is History: History, Violence, and Fictional Writing in 20th Century China (2004).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000323 Published online by Cambridge University Press