Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London.

CHRISTOPHER P. ATWOOD is an associate professor of Mongolian studies at Indiana University.

JEAN-PHILIPPE BÉJA is a senior researcher at CNRS, and works at the Centre for International Research (CERI) in Paris. Trained as a Sinologist and a political scientist, he works on the relation between the citizen and the state and on the emergence of civil society in the People's Republic of China. His latest book is a history of the pro-democracy movement in the People's Republic: A la recherche d'une ombre chinoise (Le Seuil, 2004).

CHRIS BERRY is professor of film and television studies at goldsmiths, University of London. He writing includes work on Chinese gay films.

KATHLEEN BURTON, a SOAS student of Chinese language and politics, has worked for Wetlands International – China in Beijing; at Guandu Nature Reserve in Taipei, and is currently an editor for the UNDP/GEF Yellow Sea Project. Her particular interest is environmental policy and implementation in mainland China, especially with regard to wetland habitat conservation and nature reserve management.

PARKS M. COBLE is a professor of history at the University of Nebraska. His most recent book is Chinese Capitalists in Japan's New Order: The Occupied Lower Yangzi, 1937–1945 (Berkeley, 2003).

JOHN A. DONALDSON is an assistant professor of political science at Singapore Management University. He researches development and poverty reduction in rural China, particularly southeastern China.

RICHARD LOUIS EDMONDS is visiting professor in the geographical studies program and associate member, Center for East Asian Studies, University of Chicago. His interests focus around historical geography and environmental studies. He was editor of The China Quarterly from 1996 to 2002.

DAFYDD FELL is lecturer in Taiwan studies in the department of political and international studies and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London. He is also deputy director of the SOAS Centre of Taiwan studies and convenor of the SOAS MA in Taiwan Studies degree.

KARL GERTH teaches Chinese history at the University of South Carolina and is the author of China Made: Consumer Culture and the Creation of the Nation.

BONNIE S. GLASER is a senior associate at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a think tank in Washington DC, and the Pacific Forum, CSIS. Her research interests focus on Chinese foreign and security policy and Northeast Asian security issues. She writes on Sino-American relations for the quarterly on-line journal Comparative Connections, (Pacific Forum, CSIS).

DOUG GUTHRIE is professor of management and organizations at NYU's Stern School of Business. He is author of Dragon in a Three-Piece Suit: The Emergence of Capitalism in China (Princeton 1999) and, more recently, China and Globalization: The Economic, Political, and Social Transformation of Chinese Society.

ERIC HARWIT is an associate professor of Asian studies at the University of Hawai'i at Manoa. He is the author of China's Automobile Industry and several other articles on industrial and economic development in Asia. He is currently writing a book about the development of telecommunications and the Internet in China.

XIN HE is an assistant professor at the School of Law, City University of Hong Kong. He has published many articles in the field of

© The China Quarterly, 2007 doi:10.1017/S0305741007001324

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741007001324 Published online by Cambridge University Press

China's law and society, including most recently "Why Do They Not Comply with the Law? Illegality and Semi-Legality among Rural-Urban Migrant Entrepreneurs in Beijing" in Law & Society Review. His research interests include legal enforcement, law and court, jurisprudence, and property law. He is now conducting empirical research into the Chinese court system.

CHANG-TAI HUNG is chair professor of humanities in the Division of Humanities at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, specializing in modern Chinese cultural history.

J. BRUCE JACOBS is professor of Asian languages and studies at Monash University in Melbourne, Australia. His first publication on Taiwan politics appeared in The China Quarterly in January 1971.

PAULINE KEATING is a senior lecturer in history at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. She teaches courses on modern Chinese history at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. Her publications relate to the Communist Party's rural mobilizations in the Yan'an period and also the Indusco Movement. She is currently researching the role of co-operatives in rural reconstruction projects in Republican China.

I-HAO BEN LIU completed his honours degree at Monash University in Melbourne, Australia writing a thesis on Lee Teng-hui.

EDWARD A. MCCORD is associate professor of history and international affairs in the Elliott School of International Affairs at the George Washington University. He is the author of The Power of the Gun: The Emergence of Modern Chinese Warlordism (University of California Press, 1993) and is currently working on a study of militia organization in Hunan province in Republican China.

EVAN S. MEDEIROS is a senior political scientist at the RAND Corporation, in its Washington, DC office. He specializes in research on China's foreign and national security policies and related policymaking. He has a forthcoming book on the evolution of Chinese non-proliferation behaviour, which will be published this year by Stanford University Press.

RAMON H. MYERS is senior fellow emeritus at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University, and consultant of the Hoover Archive's Chinese Archival Materials and Special Collections. Myers and Wang Yeh-chien co-authored Chapter ten titled "Economic Developments, 1644–1800 in The Cambridge History of China; Volume 9, Part One: The Ch'ing Empire to 1800 edited by Willard J. Peterson, 2002.

DANIEL L. OVERMYER is professor emeritus of Chinese religion and thought in the Department of Asian Studies and the Centre for Chinese Research at the University of British Columbia.

GLEN PETERSON is associate professor of history at the University of British Columbia. His publications include Education, Culture and Identity in Twentieth-Century China (edited with Ruth Hayhoe and Lu Yongling) and The Power of Words: Literacy and Revolution in South China, 1949–1995.

GREG ROHLF is assistant professor of history and international studies at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, California. His current research interests include state building, gender, and population movements in western China.

CAROLINE ROSE is senior lecturer in Japanese studies and head of department at the department of East Asian studies, University of Leeds. Her research focuses on the politics of history in contemporary Sino-Japanese relations and she is the author of two monographs on the 1982 textbook issue and reconciliation in Sino-Japanese relations. Other research interests include Japanese education policy, Chinese and Japanese nationalism, and Japanese foreign policy.

PETER SAUNDERS is currently the director of the Social Policy Research Centre at the University of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia. He has worked for the OECD Secretariat and been a consultant for the IMF and the Asian Development Bank on social security issues.

MARTHA SAAVEDRA is associate director of the Center for African Studies, University of California, Berkeley.

MICHAEL SCHOENHALS is senior lecturer in the Centre for Languages and Literature,

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741007001324 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Lund University, and senior research fellow in the Central Asia-Caucasus Institute Silk Road Studies Program, Uppsala University, Sweden. His most recent book, co-authored with Roderick MacFarquhar, is Mao's Last Revolution (Harvard University Press, 2006).

NANCY SHATZMAN STEINHARDT is professor of East Asian art and curator of Chinese art at the University of Pennsylvania. Her research focuses on Chinese architecture and urban planning. Steinhardt's most recent book is Steinhardt et al., Chinese Architecture (Yale, 2002).

MARINA SVENSSON is associate professor in the centre for East and South-East Asian studies, Lund University, Sweden.

TIANTIAN ZHENG is assistant professor of sociology at State University of New York, Cortland, and co-ordinator of Asian/Middle Eastern Studies.

Addendum

GUOBIN YANG, the author of "How Do Chinese Associations Respond to the Internet: Findings from a Survey" (The China Quarterly, No. 189, March 2007), was omitted in the contributors section. We apologize for this omission.

He is an associate professor in the Department of Asian and Middle Eastern Cultures at Barnard College, Columbia University. He has published on a wide range of social issues in contemporary China, including the internet and civil society, environmental NGOs, the 1989 student movement, and the Red Guard Movement.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741007001324 Published online by Cambridge University Press