NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Ismael Al-Amoudi is an associate professor at the University of Reading (UK). He is also an ISRF senior research fellow of the Centre for Social Ontology. He received his Ph.D. in management studies from the University of Cambridge in 2007. His research investigates questions of social theory and how these clarify the practices and social effects of business and management. Refereed publications include articles in the British Journal of Sociology (in press), Journal for the Theory of Social Behaviour, Organization, and Organization Studies. E-mail: ismaelalamoudi@gmail.com.

Sandrine Blanc is an assistant professor at INSEEC Business School, Paris. She received her Ph.D. in philosophy from University Paris IV-Sorbonne after obtaining her MAs in business from ESCP Europe and in philosophy from University Paris-IV Sorbonne. Her research focuses on normative issues bearing on corporations and contemporary capitalism. She has a particular interest in the significance and implications of social justice for corporations. E-mail: sblanc@inseec.com.

Wayne Eastman is a former prosecutor, corporate litigator, and labor lawyer. He is vice chair of the Department of Supply Chain Management and Marketing Science at Rutgers Business School-Newark and New Brunswick. His original research interests related to critical legal theory and law and economics. In recent years, his research emphasis has shifted to business ethics, with focuses on theorizing the relationship between the normative and empirical sides of the discipline and on ethics and game theory. E-mail: weastman@business.rutgers.edu.

Marek Hudon is professor at the Solvay Brussels School of Economics and Management (SBS-EM), Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB), Belgium. He is also co-director of the Centre for European Research in Microfinance (CERMi), and co-director of the Centre d'Etudes Economiques et Sociales de l'Environnement (CEESE). Professor Hudon holds a Ph.D. in economic and management sciences and a masters in philosophy. He was visiting scholar for one year at Harvard University in 2006, where he worked on ethical issues in microfinance. His research mainly focuses on microfinance, ethics, sustainable development, and social entrepreneurship. E-mail: mhudon@ulb.ac.be.

Lantz Fleming Miller is a doctoral candidate at City University of New York Graduate Center and has recently published or has forthcoming articles in Ethical Theory and Moral Practice, Human Rights Review, Hypatia, Journal of Agricultural and Environmental Ethics, and Philosophy od Music Education Review. His areas of interest include normative and applied ethics (business, environmental, technological, and bioethics), human rights, rationality, and music aesthetics. E-mail: flemingmiller@yahoo.com.

Geoff Moore is professor of business ethics at Durham University Business School, UK. He has published in a range of internationally recognised journals including Organization Studies, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Journal of Business Ethics. He is a member of the editorial boards of Business Ethics Quarterly and

©2013 Business Ethics Quarterly 23:4 (October 2013); ISSN 1052-150X pp. 633–634
DOI: 10.5840/beq201323447

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201323447 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Business Ethics: A European Review, and formerly of Journal of Business Ethics. In addition to work on Fair Trade, his research has mainly focused on the application of virtue ethics to business organisations, drawing particularly on the work of Alasdair MacIntyre. E-mail: geoff.moore@durham.ac.uk.

JONATHAN RAELIN received his Ph.D. in organizational development and change with a secondary in applied research methods and statistics from George Washington University. His research explores resistance to change and its relationship to stakeholder awareness. Dr. Raelin has been published in a number of management journals and is the author of Resistance to Change: Can an Underlying Affective Structure Provide Explanatory Evidence? (2008). He is an editorial board member of the Academy of Management Learning & Education. Prior to pursuing his doctorate, he served as an organizational development consultant. E-mail: jonraelin@yahoo.com.

JOAKIM SANDBERG is associate professor of practical philosophy at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden, and associate researcher at the Centre for European Research in Microfinance (CERMi). He has a broad background in both philosophy and business studies. Professor Sandberg received his Ph.D. from Gothenburg in 2008, and has since then been a visiting scholar at the University of Birmingham in 2009, the Solvay Brussels School of Economics and Management in 2011, and the Stockholm School of Economics in 2013. His main academic interests are applied political philosophy and applied ethics, especially business ethics. His recent work has focused on how to get financial institutions such as banks and pension funds to take greater responsibility for the societal and environmental effects of their activities. E-mail: joakim.sandberg@filosofi.gu.se.

JUDITH SCHREMPF-STIRLING is assistant professor of management at the University of Richmond, Robins School of Business. She received her Ph.D. at the University of Lausanne. Her research interests focus on corporate social responsibility, business and human rights, and responsible consumption. Her articles have appeared in such journals as Business & Society, Business Horizons, and Journal of Business Ethics. Home page: http://robins.richmond.edu/people/faculty/jschremp; e-mail: judith.stirling@richmond.edu.

PETE TASHMAN is an assistant professor of management with the School of Business Administration at Portland State University. His research explores the relationships between stakeholder management and corporate environmental and social performance, as well as organizational responses to ecological and social pressures. He is especially interested in how actors across sectors might better work together to solve wicked problems that require collective action. He received his Ph.D. from George Washington University. E-mail: ptashman@pdx.edu.

DUANE WINDSOR is the Lynette S. Autrey Professor of Management at Rice University, Jesse H. Jones Graduate School of Business. He received his Ph.D. from Harvard University. His research focuses on corporate social responsibility and stakeholder theory. He is the editor of Business & Society. His articles have appeared in various journals including Business & Society, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Journal of Business Ethics. E-mail: odw@rice.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201323447 Published online by Cambridge University Press