"An imaginative and unpredictable time-travel tale." —Kirkus Reviews

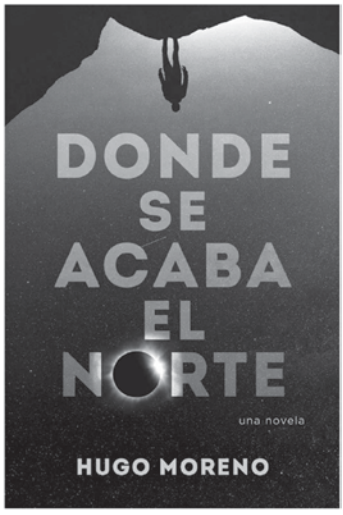

Where the North Ends

A novel by Hugo Moreno

Foreword by Francisco A. Lomelí

After a fatal accident, Uriel Romero wakes in the body of a Franciscan novice accused of heresy. Trapped in Colonial New Mexico, he must unravel the mystery of his predicament before the Inquisition burns him at the stake.

This time-travel saga, reminiscent of Cortázar's Night Face Up and Castaneda's Journey to Ixtlan, weaves history, mysticism, and existential mystery into a captivating narrative of fate, love, and redemption.

FEARLESS, SLEEPLESS, DEATHLESS
What Fungi Taught Me about Nourishment, Poison, Ecology, Hidden Histories, Zombies, and Black Survival

Maria Pinto

"I am stopped in my tracks again and again—admiring a string of lusciously juxtaposed words, laughing out loud at a slice of irony, thrilling at the syntax, the sentences—as her language carries, and often almost sings, the beauty and mystery and puzzlement and danger and invention and entanglement and fecundity and wonder of the mycological. And the mycophilic. I have rarely encountered such beautiful writing. I have rarely encountered such a beautiful book."
—Ross Gay, author of The Book of (More) Delights

Great Circle Books

240 pages $23.00 paper

VIGOROUS REFORMS
Women Writers and the Politics of Health in the Nineteenth-Century United States

Jess Libow

"Bringing into focus for the first time the extent to which nineteenth-century women writers infused health with political significance, Libow has given the field a beautifully written, eloquent book that exposes the ideological work of physical education, especially as it concerns nation-building and white supremacy. An impressive achievement."
—Sari Edelstein, University of Massachusetts, Boston

212 pages $32.95 paper

SINK OR SWIM
Capitalist Selfhood and Nineteenth-Century American Literature

Andrew Kopec

"Kopec fills an inexplicable gap in the cultural history of US financial crisis. In his book, he wisely rejects that cliché about the financial psyche—which forgets the lessons of crisis as soon as the crisis is over—and emphasizes how chaotic phases of financialization impact market actors during long periods of relative stability, making the financialized self not an aberration, but the norm for antebellum Americans."
—Matt Seybold, Elmira College

208 pages $29.95 paper

THE RECONSTRUCTION DIARY OF FRANCES ANNE ROLLIN
A Critical Edition

Edited by Jennifer Putzi

"The extraordinary nineteenth-century diary of Frances Anne Rollin documents the experiences of a politically engaged Black woman who charts her literary ambitions and personal growth during a tumultuous period of social and cultural change. This is a major contribution to literary history and required reading for anyone who cares about African American history and autobiography."
—Desirée Henderson, University of Texas at Arlington

304 pages $29.95 paper

PAINFUL FORMS
Aesthetic Violence in American Literature and Art, 1945–2001

Anna Ioanes

"Ioanes stages a dialogue between literary texts and artwork to produce rich insights into the relationship between violence, aesthetics, and American art and literature of the late twentieth century. A significant contribution."
—Stephanie Li, Duke University

224 pages $34.95 paper

ONGOING RETURN
Mapping Memory and Storytelling in Palestine

Rana Barakat

"Barakat's exceptionally well-conceived book demands a reorientation of historical narratives regarding Palestine. By centering Palestinian stories and their power to affect forms of return, Barakat shows how Palestinians resist the power of the ongoing Nakba even as they confront ongoing threats to their continuance and peoplehood."
