Notes on Contributors

Georges-Henri Soutou is Professor of Contemporary History at the University of Paris-Sorbonne (Paris-IV). He is vice-chairman of the Commission de publication des Archives du Ministère des Affaires étrangères, in charge of the 1944–54 period. His field is the history of international relations in the twentieth century. In addition to numerous articles, he has published L'Or et le Sang. Les buts de guerre économiques de la Première Guerre Mondiale (Fayard, 1989) and L'Alliance incertaine. Les rapports politico-stratégiques franco-allemands, 1954–1996 (Fayard, 1996). He has also published three volumes of articles written by Raymond Aron for Le Figaro, which appeared in 1990, 1994 and 1997 (éditions de Fallois).

Gustav Schmidt is Professor of International Politics at the Ruhr University (Bochum) and has been Visiting Professor at St Antony's College, Oxford, the University of Toronto and Emory and Cornell universities. His major piblications include The Politics and Economics of Appeasement (1985 – German original 1981), Der europäische Imperialismus (Munich, 1985) and numerous other books on European security policy and diplomacy, including Ost-West Beziehungen: Konfrontation und Détente, 1945–89 (Bochum, 1993–5). NATO – The First Fifty Years is shortly to appear with Macmillan. He is currently writing The United States, the Federal Republic of Germany, and 'Third Areas': American-German Relationships during the Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson Era.

György Péteri is Professor of the History of Contemporary Europe at the Norwegian University of Science and Technology in Trondheim. He is also Director of the Programme on East European Cultures and Societies at the same university (http://www.hf.ntnu.no/hist/peecs/main.html). He has published on inter-war monetary history and on the history of state socialism in Hungary and eastern Europe. His most recent book is Academia and State Socialism: Essays on the Political History of Academic Life in Post-1945 Hungary and Eastern Europe.

Carole Fink is Professor of European International History at the Ohio State University. She is the author of The Genoa Conference: European Diplomacy, 1921–22 (new edition, 1994), which was awarded the George Louis Beer Prize of the American Historical Association, and of Marc Bloch: A Life in History (1989,1990), which has been translated into French, Italian, Portugese and Japanese; and is co-

Contemporary European History, 9, 3 (2000), pp. 501–502 © 2000 Cambridge University Press
Printed in the United Kingdom

https://doi.org/10.1017/S096077730000312X Published online by Cambridge University Press

editor of 1968: The World Transformed (1998) and The Establishment of European Frontiers after World Wars I and II (1996).

Youssef Cassis is Professor of Economic History at the University Pierre Mendès-France (Grenoble II) and a Visiting Research Fellow in the Business History Unit at the London School of Economics. He has published extensively on business and financial history, including City Bankers, 1890–1914 (1994). His latest book, Big Business. The European Experience in the Twentieth Century (1997), has been awarded the 1998 Wadsworth Prize for Business History and re-issued as paperback in 1999. He is co-founding editor of Financial History Review and sits on the editorial boards of this journal, as well as Entreprises et Histoire and Enterprise and Society. He is currently engaged in research projects on the performance of European business in the twentieth century and on the history of international financial centres.

Paul Ginsborg is Professor of Contemporary European History in the Faculty of Letters and Philosophy, University of Florence. He has published principally on nineteenth- and twentieth-century Italian history, and his books include Daniele Manin and the Venetian Revolution of 1848–1849 (1979), A History of Contemporary Italy (1990), and L'Italia del tempo presente (1998). He is currently working on the European family, civil society and the state.

Dick Geary was, with Kathleen Burk, founding co-editor of Contemporary European History and is Professor of Modern History at the University of Nottingham. Among his publications are Karl Kautsky (1987), Hitler and Nazism (second edition, 2000), and (with Richard J. Evans), The German Unemployed (1987), as well as several books on European labour, including European Labour Protest (second edition, 1984) and European Labour Politics from 1900 to the Depression (1991). He is currently completing Unemployment and the Collapse of the Weimar Republic for the University of Michigan Press.

Frédéric Lebaron is maître de conférences in sociology at the University of Picardie-Jules Verne (Amiens) and researcher at the Centre de Sociologie Européenne (Collège de France). He is the author of La croyance économique. Les économistes entre science et politique (2000) and co-author of Le 'décembre' des intellectuels français (1998).

Karen Adler was formerly Lecturer in Modern History at Cardiff University and Research Fellow at the University of Sydney. She now holds a post-doctoral Research Fellowship at the University of Nottingham. She has published on the Liberation of France, and her monograph, Jewishness, Gender and Betrayal in France, 1942–48 is due to appear with Cambridge University Press. Her current research topic is entitled 'Michelin, Indochina and Mapping a New France', which relates the socioeconomic history of France between c.1900 and 1940 to French colonialism in south-east Asia.

William B. Cohen is Professor of History at Indiana University. He is the author of Rulers of Empire: The French Colonial Service in Africa (1971), The French Encounter with Africans (1980), Urban Government and the Rise of the French City (1998). He is currently working on a book on French memory and the Algerian war of independence.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S096077730000312X Published online by Cambridge University Press