"Enough provides a comprehensive, but easily understandable, review of cervical cancer prevention, screening and treatment, covering the ethical issues surrounding inequalities that mean this preventable cancer is still a major killer."

Mary Ann Lumsden OBE, International Federation of Obstetrics and Gynecology
#CervicalCancerAwarenessMonth

"This is a beautifully written powerful tale of truth and hope, as Dr. Eckert combines her authoritative work with cervical cancer prevention alongside the inspiring voices of women from all over the world."

Princess Nono Simelela, Former WHO Assistant Director General for Strategic Priorities

"Intimate, and informative, I reminds us that the choice to end cervical cancer belongs to each of us. Now is the time to act."

Heather White, TogetHER for Health
