NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

James Aho is professor of sociology, emeritus, Idaho State University. His latest book, co-authored with Kevin Aho, is Body Matters: A Phenomenology of Sickness, Disease, and Illness. He is also author of Confession and Bookkeeping: The Religious, Moral, and Rhetorical Roots of Modern Accounting. E-mail: ahojame@isu.edu.

Deepa Aravind is an assistant professor of management at the Department of Business, City University of New York, College of Staten Island. She received her Ph.D. from Rutgers University. Her current research interests are in the areas of corporate social responsibility initiatives (including certifiable environmental standards and the United Nations Global Compact) and the adoption and implementation of management practices/innovations in firms. E-mail: deepa.aravind@csi.cuny.edu.

Michael Behnam is an associate professor of strategy and international business in the Sawyer Business School at Suffolk University, Boston. After obtaining his Ph.D. at the Johann Wolfgang Goethe-University in Frankfurt, Germany, he taught at the European Business School in Oestrich-Winkel, Germany, where he is still affiliated as a research fellow. He has published several books and numerous articles (e.g., in Academy of Management Journal, Journal of International Management, Journal of Management Inquiry, Journal of Business Ethics, and Business Ethics Quarterly) in the areas of business ethics and international strategy. His most recent work centers on international accountability standards as well as international knowledge transfer. E-mail: mbehnam@suffolk.edu.

Leonard J. Brooks is professor of business ethics and accounting and executive director of the Clarkson Centre for Business Ethics and Board Effectiveness at the Rotman School of Management, University of Toronto. He has authored or co-audited/edited the following books: Business & Professional Ethics for Directors, Executives & Accountants, 5th ed. (2010); Ethics & Governance: Developing and Maintaining an Ethical Corporate Culture, 3rd ed. (2008); and Principles of Stakeholder Management (1999). Recent shorter publications have dealt with topics such as conflicts of interest, earnings management, and corporate responsibility. Professor Brooks teaches business and professional ethics and governance in the University's graduate and executive programs. E-mail: len.brooks@utoronto.ca.

Petra Christmann is an associate professor of management and global business at Rutgers University's business school. Prior to joining Rutgers University, Petra was on the faculty of the Darden School at the University of Virginia. She received her Ph.D. in strategy and international business from UCLA. Petra's research focuses on firms' environmental strategies, business self-regulation, and certifiable standards as governance mechanisms in the global economy. Her work has been published in leading academic journals including Academy of Management Journal and Journal of International Business Studies. Petra currently serves on the editorial board of the Journal of International Business Studies. E-mail: christmannp@business.rutgers.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

ANDREW CRANE is the George R. Gardiner Professor of Business Ethics and co-director of the Centre of Excellence in Responsible Business at the Schulich School of Business, York University. His work focuses on the nature of corporate responsibility and the way in which issues of responsibility are constructed and communicated in and around organizations. He is the author or editor of eight books, including the award-winning textbook Business Ethics: Managing Corporate Citizenship and Sustainability in the Age of Globalization, and the Oxford Handbook of Corporate Social Responsibility. He is also a co-author of the Crane and Matten blog (http://craneandmatten.blogspot.com). E-mail:acrane@schulich.yorku.ca.

MAGALI A. DELMAS is a professor of management at the Anderson School of Management and the Institute of the Environment and Sustainability at the University of California Los Angeles. She is the Director of the UCLA Center for Corporate Environmental Performance and a Luskin Scholar. She is an affiliated professor of the Donald Bren School of Environmental Science and Management at UC Santa Barbara. Standing at the crossroads of policy and management, her research interests focus on the various interactions between environmental policy and business strategy at the national and international level. Professor Delmas's current work includes the analysis of the effectiveness of firms' voluntary environmental initiatives. E-mail: delmas@ucla.edu.

DIRK ULRICH GILBERT is a professor of management at the University of Erlangen-Nuremberg, Germany. After obtaining his Ph.D. at the Johann Wolfgang Goethe University in Frankfurt, Germany, he taught at the European Business School in Oestrich-Winkel, Germany, and The University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. He has published several books and numerous articles in the areas of business ethics, international strategy, and organizational theory. His most recent work centers on regional strategies of MNCs, strategic networks, and international accountability standards. E-mail: dirk.gilbert@phil.uni-erlangen.de.

KENNETH E. GOODPASTER holds the David and Barbara Koch Endowed Chair in Business Ethics, Opus College of Business, University of St. Thomas, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Goodpaster taught moral philosophy at the University of Notre Dame throughout the 1970s before joining the Harvard Business School faculty in 1980. At Harvard, he taught business ethics for ten years to MBA students before moving to St. Thomas. His most recent book is Conscience and Corporate Culture (Wiley-Blackwell Publishers, 2007). E-mail: kegoodpaster@stthomas.edu.

EDWARD J. KANE is professor of finance in the Carroll School of Management at Boston College. He received his Ph.D. from Massachusetts Institution of Technology. Previously, Kane occupied the Everett D. Reese Chair of Banking and Monetary Economics at Ohio State University and also taught at Princeton University and Iowa State University. Kane has also held several visiting professorships and is a past president and fellow of the American Finance Association and a former Guggenheim fellow. He serves on the editorial boards of several journals and is a founding member of the Shadow Financial Regulatory Committee. Currently, he consults for the World Bank and is a Senior Fellow in the FDIC's Center or Financial Research. E-mail: edward.kane@bc.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

TAMMY L. MACLEAN is an associate professor of management at Suffolk University, Sawyer Business School. She earned her Ph.D. in organizational behavior at Boston College. Her research interests focus on how decoupling organizational programs and initiatives from core business functions affects organizational behavior at multiple levels of analyses. She also does research in the areas of managing diversity and organizational identity. She has published numerous articles in journals such as Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Journal of Management Inquiry, and Journal of Business Ethics. E-mail: tmaclean@suffolk.edu.

MARCIA P. MICELI is professor of management at the McDonough School of Business at Georgetown University. She earned her doctorate in business administration at Indiana University. Her research focuses on whistle-blowing and on organizational compensation systems, with publications in Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Administrative Science Quarterly, Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Applied Psychology, Organization Science, Personnel Psychology, and other leading journals. With Janet Near and Terry Dworkin, she wrote Whistle-blowing in Organizations (New York: Routledge/Taylor & Francis Group, 2008). She teaches human resource management courses at the graduate and undergraduate levels. E-mail: micelim@georgetown.edu.

MARIA J. MONTES-SANCHO is an associate professor of management at the Department of Business Administration at Universidad Carlos III where she earned her Ph.D. in business administration and quantitative methods. Before her current position, she was a research fellow at Stanford University, the University of California, Santa Barbara, and the University of California, Los Angeles, and a visiting professor at Universitat Pompeu Fabra. Her research interests include environmental policy, corporate strategy, and environmental performance measurement. Her publications include articles in Management Science and the Strategic Management Journal. E-mail: mmontes@emp.uc3m.es.

GEOFF MOORE is professor of business ethics at Durham Business School, Durham University, UK. He has published widely in Business Ethics including, in particular, applying Alasdair MacIntyre's virtue ethics to business organisations. His articles appear in international journals including Business Ethics Quarterly, Organization Studies, and Journal of Business Ethics. He is on the editorial boards of Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics, and Business Ethics: A European Review. E-mail: geoff.moore@durham.ac.uk.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

ANDREAS RASCHE is assistant professor of business in society at Warwick Business School. He holds a Ph.D. (Dr. rer. pol.) from European Business School, Germany, and a Habilitation (Dr. habil.) from Helmut-Schmidt-University, Hamburg. His research focuses on the emerging global institutional infrastructure for corporate responsibility. He regularly contributes to international journals in his field of study and has lectured widely on corporate social and environmental responsibility at different institutions in Europe. His latest book, The United Nations Global Compact: Achievements, Trends and Challenges (Cambridge University Press), just appeared in print. E-mail: andreas.rasche@wbs.ac.uk.

SCOTT J. REYNOLDS is an associate professor of business ethics and the Helen Moore Gerhardt Faculty Fellow at the Foster School of Business at the University of Washington. His research explores moral decision-making and is specifically focused on how individuals perceive, identify and process the moral aspects of life. His research has appeared in a variety of journals including the Journal of Applied Psychology and Business Ethics Quarterly. E-mail: heyscott@u.washington.edu.

MARSHALL SCHMINKE is the BB&T Professor of Business Ethics at the University of Central Florida. He received his doctorate from Carnegie Mellon University, and has served as a visiting scholar at Oxford University. He is an academic fellow at the Ethics Resource Center in Washington, D.C., and a member of the Society for Organizational Behavior. He has served as associate editor of the Academy of Management Journal and is currently associate editor of Business Ethics Quarterly. E-mail: mschminke@bus.ucf.edu.

DOUGLAS SCHULER is associate professor of business and public policy at the Jesse H. Jones Graduate School of Business of Rice University. His research focuses upon company political activities and corporate social responsibility and has been published in such journals as the Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, and the Journal of Management. Dr. Schuler serves on the editorial board of Business & Society. He received his Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota and B.S. from the University of California at Berkeley. E-mail: schuler@rice.edu.

SANDRA WADDOCK is Galligan Chair of Strategy and Professor of Management at Boston College's Carroll School of Management. Author of more than 100 articles and several books, she writes extensively on corporate responsibility. Her most recent books are The Difference Makers: How Social and Institutional Entrepreneurs Built the Corporate Responsibility Movement (Greenleaf, 2008) and the forthcoming SEE Change: Making the Transition to a Sustainable Enterprise Economy, with Malcolm McIntosh (Greenleaf, in press). E-mail: waddock@bc.edu.

GARY R. WEAVER is Editor in Chief of Business Ethics Quarterly and professor of management at the University of Delaware's Alfred Lerner College of Business and Economics. He researches and writes on a variety of issues concerning ethics and corruption in organizations, considering the roles of both individual behavior and the larger institutional context of business as important factors in business ethics. E-mail: beq@udel.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

ANDREW C. WICKS is the Ruffin Professor of Business Administration at the Darden School of Business at the University of Virginia. He is director of the Olsson Center for Ethics, director of the doctoral program, academic advisor for the Business Roundtable Institute for Corporate Ethics and an adjunct professor in the Religious Studies department at UVA. Wicks is co-author of three books including Managing for Stakeholders: Survival, Reputation and Success (Yale University Press, 2007), Business Ethics: A Managerial Approach (Prentice Hall, 2010), and Stakeholder Theory: The State of the Art (Cambridge University Press, 2010). He has published over thirty journal articles, and his work has appeared in a wide variety of journals in business ethics, management, and the humanities. His research interests include stakeholder responsibility, stakeholder theory, trust, health care ethics, total quality management, and ethics and entrepreneurship. He works with MBA students, executives, and corporations in the United States and abroad. Wicks is actively working with Ethics-LX, an entrepreneurial venture, to create a series of web-based simulations that incorporate ethics into the functional areas of business. He has received awards for both his research and teaching. Wicks joined the Darden faculty in 2002 after teaching for ten years at the University of Washington Graduate Business School. E-mail: WicksA@darden.virginia.edu.

GREGORY WOLCOTT is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Philosophy at Loyola University Chicago. He teaches in the areas of political philosophy, ethical theory, and business ethics. His writings have appeared in the Journal of Applied Philosophy and the Review Journal of Political Philosophy. E-mail: gwolcot@luc.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121111 Published online by Cambridge University Press