CONTRIBUTORS

David Schmidtz is Editor of Social Philosophy & Policy.

Jason Brennan is the Robert J. and Elizabeth Flanagan Family Professor of Strategy, Economics, Ethics, and Public Policy at Georgetown University's McDonough School of Business. He is Editor-in-Chief of Philosophy & Public Affairs. He recently completed a $2.1 million project on "Markets, Social Entrepreneurship, and Effective Altruism," funded by the John Templeton Foundation. He is the author of over sixty peer-reviewed articles and seventeen books, which have been translated into seventeen languages, most recently Questioning Beneficence (2024; with Samuel Arnold, Richard Yetter Chappell, and Ryan W. Davis); Democracy: A Guided Tour (2023); Debating Democracy (2021; with Hélène Landemore); and Business Ethics for Better Behavior (2021; with William English, John Hasnas, and Peter Jaworski).

Saura Masconale is Associate Director at the University of Arizona Center for the Philosophy of Freedom, Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Economy and Moral Science, and Affiliated Faculty in the James E. Rogers College of Law. At the Freedom Center, she is also in charge of the Master of Legal Studies, Law & Economics concentration, which the Center cosponsors with the James E. Rogers College of Law. Her research studies how the intersection of legal entitlements, politics, and economic forces affect society as both a positive and normative matter. Her scholarship focuses on exploring the implications of this intersection in the public corporation context. Masconale's articles have appeared in journals such as Northwestern Law Review, Texas Law Review, Washington University Law Review, Journal of Corporate Law, and Social Philosophy & Policy. Her most recent work examines the evolution of the corporation from a mere economic agent to a new political actor and explores the democratic and political implications of this transformation.

Simone M. Sepe is Chester H. Smith Professor and Professor of Law and Finance at the University of Arizona's James E. Rogers College of Law. His areas of expertise include business organizations, corporate finance, contract theory, law and economics, law and philosophy, and empirical methods. His scholarship focuses on theoretical and empirical problems related to corporate governance, contract law, the theory of institutions, and political philosophy. Sepe practiced banking and finance law at Clifford Chance, an international law firm based in London, and worked as an investment banker at Fortress Investment Group in London and

New York. He has published dozens of articles in law journals, including Notre Dame Law Review, Harvard Journal of Law and Technology, Texas Law Review, and Cornell Law Review.

Samuel Arnold is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Texas Christian University. His research focuses on liberal egalitarian theories of justice, especially the work of John Rawls; the division of labor and work; consumerism and voluntary simplicity; socialism; and alternatives to consumer capitalism. His work has appeared in journals such as Journal of Political Philosophy, Journal of Political Power, Southwest Philosophy Review, and Critical Review. He is a coauthor of Questioning Beneficence (2024; with Jason Brennan, Richard Yetter Chappell, and Ryan W. Davis).

Brian Berkey is an Associate Professor of Legal Studies and Business Ethics in the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania. He works in moral and political philosophy, including business ethics and environmental ethics. He has published on issues such as the demandingness of morality, individual and corporate obligations of justice, ethical issues arising with regard to climate change, exploitation, effective altruism, animal ethics, collective obligations, ethical consumerism, and the relationship between ideal and non-ideal theory. Berkey is also interested in methodological issues in ethics and political philosophy, including the appropriate role of appeals to intuitions. His work has appeared in journals such as Philosophy & Public Affairs, Ethics, Mind, Philosophical Studies, Canadian Journal of Philosophy, Utilitas, Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics, and Journal of Applied Philosophy.

Holly Lawford-Smith is an Associate Professor in Political Philosophy at the University of Melbourne. She is the author of Is It Wrong to Buy Sex? (2024); Sex Matters: Essays in Gender-Critical Philosophy (2023); Gender-Critical Feminism (2022); and Not in Their Name: Are Citizens Culpable for Their States' Actions? (2019). She teaches courses in moral and political philosophy, including feminism, free speech, and hate speech. She has published in journals including Journal of Political Philosophy, Journal of Moral Philosophy, Journal of the American Philosophical Association, Canadian Journal of Philosophy, Australasian Journal of Philosophy, and Political Studies. Lawford-Smith writes regularly for online magazines Quillette and Fairer Disputations. Her current work is on the relationship between feminism and the left-right political spectrum.

Jessica Flanigan is the Richard L. Morrill Chair in Ethics and Democratic Values and Professor of Leadership Studies and Philosophy, Politics, Economics, and Law at the University of Richmond. Her research addresses topics in bioethics and political philosophy, with a particular focus on public health ethics, economic justice, and the enforceability of rights. Flanigan has published in journals such as Philosophical Studies, The Journal of Business Ethics, Leadership, The Journal of Moral Philosophy, and Journal of Political Philosophy. She is the author of Pharmaceutical Freedom (2017) and the coauthor of Debating Sex Work (2019; with Lori Watson). She is currently working on a book about the ethics of pregnancy and a book about language and ethics.

Brandon Warmke is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Bowling Green State University. He has written widely on moral, social, and political philosophy. With Justin Tosi, he is the coauthor of Grandstanding: The Use and Abuse of Moral Talk (2020) and Why It's OK to Mind Your Own Business (2023). He is coeditor of Forgiveness and Its Moral Dimensions (2021; with Dana Kay Nelkin and Michael McKenna). He has a forthcoming book on conservatism and has published articles in journals such as Philosophy & Public Affairs, Journal of Moral Philosophy, Pacific Philosophical Quarterly, and Faith and Philosophy.

Ryan W. Davis is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Brigham Young University. He writes about ethics, political philosophy, and philosophy of religion. Most of his work relates in some way to the value of autonomy and his research grapples with the questions: What are individuals morally required to do and what explains these requirements? What political rights do persons have and are some rights more important than others? Do political institutions or agents enjoy special normative powers or privileges that ordinary persons lack? What is the relationship between moral reasons and religious commitments? He publishes in journals such as The Journal of Politics; Ethical Theory and Moral Practice; Politics, Philosophy, and Economics; and Journal of Religious Ethics. He is a coauthor of Questioning Beneficence (2024; with Samuel Arnold, Richard Yetter Chappell, and Jason Brennan).

Theron Pummer is Professor of Philosophy at the University of St Andrews. He focuses mainly on problems in ethics. He has also held visiting positions at the Australian National University (2023) and the University of Oxford (2024). He is an associate editor of Journal of Moral Philosophy and a section editor of Philosophy Compass. His book The Rules of Rescue: Cost, Distance, and Effective Altruism (2023) presents a novel view of lifetime requirements to help others and provides a nonconsequentialist case for engaging in effective altruism. His articles have been published in venues such as Ethics, Philosophy & Public Affairs, The Journal of Philosophy, Philosophical Review, and Philosophy and Phenomenological Research. His article "Impermissible yet Praiseworthy" was selected by the Philosopher's Annual as "one of the ten best articles in philosophy from 2021." Pummer is currently working on a book titled Hypersensitive Ethics: Much Ado about Nearly Nothing.

Christopher Freiman is Professor of General Business in the John Chambers College of Business and Economics at West Virginia University and the Director of Outreach for the Kendrick Center for an Ethical Economy. He is the author of two books, Unequivocal Justice (2017) and Why It's OK to Ignore Politics (2021). Freiman has also published over forty articles and chapters on various topics, including democratic theory, distributive justice, and immigration. His work has appeared in journals such as Australasian Journal of Philosophy; Philosophy and Phenomenological Research; Philosophical Studies; The Journal of Political Philosophy; Social Philosophy & Policy; The Journal of Ethics; and Politics, Philosophy, and Economics.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

In memory of David Keyt (1930-2025), Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at the University of Washington and Research Fellow of the Center for the Philosophy of Freedom at the University of Arizona. He was widely esteemed for his important philosophical contributions, especially publications concerning the moral and political philosophy of Plato and Aristotle. Through a long career that included a productive retirement he blessed many lives with his wisdom and wit, his inspiring teaching and mentorship, and his friendly and supportive collegiality. David was a faithful reader of Social Philosophy & Policy since its inaugural issue in 1983, and he was Special Editor of Volume 24 Issue 2 (2007) on Ancient Greek Political Philosophy.
