The Journal of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era 17 (2018), v–vii doi:10.1017/S1537781418000233

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781418000233 Published online by Cambridge University Press

CONTRIBUTORS

Manfred Berg is the Curt Engelhorn Professor of American History at Heidelberg University. His research interests comprise the history of the African American civil rights movement, race relations, popular violence, criminal justice, and U.S. foreign policy. He is the author and editor of eighteen books, including, most recently, Woodrow Wilson. Amerika und die Neuordnung der Welt. Eine Biographie (2017). In 2016, Berg received the Distinguished Historian's Award from the Society of Historians of the Gilded Age and the Progressive Era.

John Enyeart is an Associate Professor of History at Bucknell University. His first book demonstrates how Rocky Mountain workers used their unions to advance social democracy during the Gilded Age and Progressive Era. He has just finished his second book on Slovene immigrant writer Louis Adamic, which will appear in early 2019. Adamic's antifascist activism made him a leading voice on the left, but red baiting has obscured the legacy.

Manuel Franz is a Doctoral Candidate at Heidelberg University, Germany. His dissertation, "Preparedness, Paranoia, Patriotism: Defense Societies and the Quest for Americanism, 1914–1920," explores the civilian branch of the American preparedness movement.

Mary Ann Heiss of Kent State University has written widely on the Anglo-American relationship. Her most recent work on that subject is From Interest to Involvement: The United States, Great Britain, and the UN Role in Non-Self-Governing Territories, 1945–1963 (under contract, Cornell University Press).

Mischa Honeck is a Senior Lecturer in History at Humboldt University of Berlin. He is the author of Our Frontier Is the World: The Boy Scouts in the Age of American Ascendancy (Cornell University Press, 2018); We Are the Revolutionists: German-Speaking Immigrants and American Abolitionists after 1848 (University of Georgia Press, 2011); and co-editor of War and Childhood in the Era of the Two World Wars (2018).

Axel Jansen is Deputy Director of the German Historical Institute Washington, DC. His research focuses on United States history in a transatlantic context. He has taught at universities in the United States and in Germany, among them Frankfurt, Tübingen, Heidelberg, UCLA, and the University of Oregon. His key publications include Alexander Dallas Bache: Building the American Nation through Science and Education in the © Society for Historians of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era

Nineteenth Century (Campus Verlag, 2011) and Legitimizing Science: National and Global Publics, 1800–2010 (co-edited with Andreas Franzmann, and Peter Münte, University of Chicago Press, 2015).

Jennifer D. Keene is a Professor of History at Chapman University. She has published three books and numerous articles on the American involvement in the First World War including Doughboys, the Great War and the Remaking of America (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2001) and World War I: The American Soldier Experience (Bison Books, 2011). She is the lead author for an American history textbook, Visions of America: A History of the United States that uses a visual approach to teaching students U.S. history. She has served as a historical consultant for exhibits and documentary films, and she is also a general editor for the "1914-1918-online," http://www.1914-1918-online.net/, a major digital humanities project.

Ross A. Kennedy is Professor of History and Chair of the history department at Illinois State University. He the author of The Will to Believe: Woodrow Wilson, World War I, and America's Strategy for Peace and Security (Kent State University Press, 2009), which won the Scott Bills Prize in Peace History. He also edited A Companion to Woodrow Wilson (Wiley-Blackwell, 2013) and has written extensively on American foreign policy during World War I. Kennedy's current project, entitled "The United States and the Origins of World War II," analyzes the role of the United States in Great Power politics from 1918 to 1939.

Katherine Lennard is a Thinking Matters Fellow at Stanford University. A cultural historian who studies visual and material cultures of race, she is currently at work on a book project titled Uniform Threat: Dressing the Ku Klux Klan's Invisible Empire.

Charlotte A. Lerg is Assistant Professor of American History and Transatlantic Studies at Ludwig-Maximilian University, Munich. She received an MA in Modern History and Philosophy from the University of St. Andrews and a PhD in History from Tübingen University, and she has held fellowships at the John W. Kluge Center (Library of Congress) and at the German Historical Institute in Washington, DC. Her research focuses on cultural and intellectual history of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries with a particular interest in new diplomatic history and the history of higher education as well as the role of propaganda and visual culture.

Arwen P. Mohun is the Henry Clay Reed Professor of History at the University of Delaware. Her most recent book is Risk: Negotiating Safety in American Society (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2013).

Sumiko Otsubo is Professor of History at Metropolitan State University in St. Paul, Minnesota. Her research focuses on the body, gender, medicine, and disease in modern Japanese history. She has published many chapters and articles on these subjects.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781418000233 Published online by Cambridge University Press

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781418000233 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Charles Postel is a Professor at San Francisco State University. His first book, The Populist Vision (Oxford University Press, 2007), is a history of the populist movement of the 1890s. He is currently working on a new book project, Equality: An American Dilemma,1866–1886, a history of the social movements that confronted the savage racial, sexual, and economic inequalities of post-Civil War America.

Elisabeth Piller received her PhD from the University of Trondheim, NTNU, Norway, in February 2018 with a dissertation on German Public Diplomacy and the United States in the first half of the twentieth century. She is currently developing a new project on the global history of the Commission for Relief in Belgium during the First World War and will take up a post-doctoral position at University College Dublin in the fall of 2018. Her work has appeared in a number of journals and edited volumes, including Immigrants and Minorities and the Journal of Contemporary History.

Helke Rausch is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Freiburg, Germany. She is a former JFK Memorial Fellow of the Center for European Studies at Harvard University and a Global Scholar and Diversity Grantee of SHAFR. She published widely on U.S.-American Foundations' scientific internationalism and diplomatic intervention strategies in Western Europe during the 1920s to 1950s and, with John Krige, co-edited American Foundations and the Coproduction of World Order in the 20th Century Rausch (Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2012). Her current second book project traces Carnegie, Rockefeller and Ford Philanthropies in Western Europe from the 1920s to the 1970s.

Katherine Unterman, an Associate Professor at Texas A&M University, received her PhD in History from Yale University in 2011. Her first book, Uncle Sam's Policemen: The Pursuit of Fugitives Across Borders, was published by Harvard University Press in 2015.