Notes on the Contributors

Alison Bailey is Professor of Philosophy and Director of the Women's and Gender Studies Program at Illinois State University. She has published extensively on issues at the intersections of feminist theory, philosophy of race, critical whiteness studies, and social epistemology.

Olivia Bailey is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Tulane University. Her work is concerned with the moral and epistemic significance of emotion and imagination, with a particular focus on the insights of 18th century Scottish sentimentalism.

Simon Barker is a PhD Candidate in Philosophy at the University of Sheffield. His work focuses on deep disagreement and epistemic self-trust.

Heather Battaly is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Connecticut. She is the author of Virtue (Polity Press, 2015), and the editor of The Routledge Handbook of Virtue Epistemology (Routledge, 2019). She is currently writing a book on epistemic vice.

Havi Carel is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Bristol and a Wellcome Trust Senior Investigator, leading the Life of Breath project (2014–2020; <www.lifeofbreath.org>). She is the author of several books, most recently Phenomenology of Illness (Oxford, 2016).

Quassim Cassam is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Warwick. He has also taught at Cambridge, Oxford, and UCL. He is the author of five books, all published by Oxford University Press.

Charlie Crerar is an Assistant Research Professor in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Connecticut. He previously completed a PhD in philosophy at the University of Sheffield.

Miranda Fricker is Presidential Professor of Philosophy at The Graduate Center, CUNY. Her research is mainly in Moral Philosophy, Feminist Philosophy, and Social Epistemology. She is a Fellow of the British Academy.

doi:10.1017/S1358246118000516 ©The Royal Institute of Philosophy and the contributors 2018

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1358246118000516 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Notes on the Contributors

Trystan S. Goetze recently completed his PhD in Philosophy at the University of Sheffield. His thesis concerns our moral and epistemic responsibilities regarding our social and moral concepts. He is currently working on a project on epistemic culpability.

Heidi Grasswick is the George Nye and Anne Walker Boardman Professor of Mental and Moral Science in the Philosophy Department at Middlebury College. Her interests include feminist epistemology, epistemic trust relations, and the relationship between individuals and communities in responsible inquiry.

Keith Harris is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Missouri. His research spans several topics in social and individual epistemology including group belief and group knowledge, the norms of assertion, and knowledge-how.

Casey Rebecca Johnson is Assistant Professor of Philosophy in the Politics and Philosophy Department at the University of Idaho. Previously, she was a Postdoctoral Fellow on the project on Humility and Conviction in Public Life at the University of Connecticut.

Ian James Kidd is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Nottingham. His interests include epistemology and the philosophies of illness and of healthcare. He is currently co-editing Vice Epistemology (Routledge, 2020), with Heather Battaly and Quassim Cassam.

Alessandra Tanesini is Professor of Philosophy at Cardiff University. Her current work lies at the intersection of ethics, the philosophy of language, and epistemology with a focus on epistemic vice, silencing, and ignorance.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1358246118000516 Published online by Cambridge University Press