NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Markus Beckmann is professor of corporate sustainability management at Friedrich-Alexander University of Erlangen-Nuremberg (Germany). In his research, he has focused on sustainability management, social entrepreneurship, business ethics and corporate social responsibility. His work has appeared in journals such as Business and Society, Business Strategy and the Environment, Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of Corporate Citizenship, and Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Quarterly. E-mail: markus.beckmann@fau.de.

Georges Enderle is the John T. Ryan Jr. Professor of International Business Ethics at the Mendoza College of Business, University of Notre Dame (Indiana, USA), and former president of the International Society of Business, Economics, and Ethics (ISBEE; 2001–2004). Educated in philosophy (Munich), theology (Lyon), economics (Fribourg), and business ethics (St. Gallen), he has extensive research and teaching experiences in Europe (1983–1992), the United States (since 1992), and China (since 1994). He has authored and edited eighteen books and over 140 articles. He conducts research on the ethics of globalization, wealth creation, business and human rights, and corporate responsibilities of large and small companies, with a view on developments in China. E-mail: genderle@nd.edu.

William C. Frederick is Professor Emeritus, Katz Graduate School of Business, University of Pittsburgh, USA. His academic interests are corporate social responsibility, business ethics, and evolutionary economics. His most recently published book is Natural Corporate Management: From the Big Bang to Wall Street (Greenleaf, 2012). E-mail: BILLFRED@katz.pitt.edu.

Pablo Garcia-Ruiz is an associate professor of sociology at the University of Zaragoza (Spain). He earned a B.A. and a Ph.D. in philosophy (social theory) from the University of Navarra and an M.B.A. from IESE Business School. He spent a year as a post-doc research scholar at the Institute for Business and Society, London School of Economics. His recent research deals with the relationship between consumption and identity formation, and the role of consumption in the emergence of new forms of citizenship. E-mail: pgruiz@unizar.es.

Stefan Hielscher is a post-doctoral research fellow at the Martin-Luther-University Halle-Wittenberg, Chair of Economic Ethics (Germany). He received his Ph.D. in economics from the same institution. His research interests are in corporate social responsibility (both conceptual and theoretical), corporate citizenship, corporate sustainability, as well as institutional development and rational-choice theory. He is also interested in the theoretical foundations of business ethics. His work has appeared in journals such as Business & Society, Business Ethics Quarterly, Business Strategy and the Environment, Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of Economic Issues, and Systems Research and Behavioral Science. E-mail: stefan.hielscher@wiwi.uni-halle.de.

Tae Wan Kim is an assistant professor of ethics in the Tepper School of Business at Carnegie Mellon University. He earned his Ph.D. at the Legal Studies and Business Ethics

©2014 Business Ethics Quarterly 24:4 (October 2014); ISSN 1052-150X pp. 631–632
DOI: 10.5840/beq201424423

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424423 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Department of the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania in 2012. Two main themes of his work are developing a Confucian/Chinese perspective on business ethics and exploring moral issues in business by drawing upon and further developing Western ethical theory. Additionally, he seeks an interdisciplinary project to better understand relationships between ethics and management research. He has published in Business Ethics Quarterly and Journal of Business Ethics. E-mail: twkim@andrew.cmu.edu.

KIRSTEN MARTIN is an assistant professor of strategic management and public policy at the George Washington University's School of Business. She is also the vice chair of the Census Bureau's National Advisory Committee for her work on privacy. She earned her B.S. in engineering from the University of Michigan and her M.B.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Virginia's Darden Graduate School of Business. Her research interests center on technology and privacy, corporate responsibility, and stakeholder theory. E-mail: martink@gwu.edu.

MARSHALL W. PATTIE is an associate professor of management at James Madison University. He earned his Ph.D. in management from the University of Texas at Arlington. He is currently investigating the complexity of leadership as it pertains to ethics, motivation and performance. E-mail: pattiemw@jmu.edu.

INGO PIES is professor of economic ethics at the Martin-Luther-University Halle-Wittenberg (Germany). His main research areas include economic ethics, business ethics, normative institutional economics and ordonomics, as well as global governance and corporate citizenship. He is member of the editorial board of the ordo-liberal yearbook ORDO. His work has appeared in journals such as Constitutional Political Economy, Business & Society, Business Ethics Quarterly, Business Strategy and the Environment, Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of Global Ethics, and the European Journal of Law and Economics. E-mail: ingo.pies@wiwi.uni-halle.de.

CARLOS RODRIGUEZ-LLUESMA is an assistant professor at IESE Business School's Department of Managing People in Organizations. He earned B.A. and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy at the University of Navarra, an M.B.A. at IESE Business School, and a Ph.D. in management science and engineering at Stanford University. He has published numerous papers, books, and book chapters on virtual teams, technology management, consumption, and philosophy. E-mail: clluesma@iese.edu.

SHANNON G. TAYLOR is an assistant professor of management at the University of Central Florida. He earned a Ph.D. in management from Louisiana State University. His current research interests include abusive and unethical workplace behavior and the dynamic nature of workplace phenomena. E-mail: sgtaylor@ucf.edu.

FLORIAN WETTSTEIN is professor and chair of business ethics and director of the Institute for Business Ethics at University of St. Gallen in Switzerland. He has published widely on topics at the intersection of business ethics, corporate responsibility, and human rights and is the author of Multinational Corporations and Global Justice: Human Rights Obligations of a Quasi-Governmental Institution (Stanford University Press, 2009). Florian is co-editor in chief of Cambridge University Press's new Business and Human Rights Journal (BHRJ), to be launched in 2015. E-mail: florian.wettstein@unisg.ch.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424423 Published online by Cambridge University Press