NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

Readers of the British Journal of Psychiatry, in whatever part of the world they may be, will not need to be reminded that the price of everything is rising in these days of inflation.

Printing and paper charges for the Journal have been steadily increasing over the past year, in common with those of all other publications, and this fact plus the recent steep rise in postage rates in the United Kingdom has compelled us, with regret, to put up the subscription yet again. Accordingly, from January 1976, the annual subscription will be £35.00, and the price of a single issue £3.50, including postage in each case. This increase does not, of course, apply to those who receive the Journal as part of their membership of the Royal College of Psychiatrists.

We regret the necessity for this increase, but feel sure that readers will appreciate that it is unavoidable.
