(Language, Power and Social Process)

This is an ethnographic study of language use and language planning on the French island of Corsica where there has been language shift away from the minority language (Corsican) towards French. Jaffe uses case studies of language classrooms, spelling contests, public debates over language legislation and codeswitching on bilingual radio programs to explore the complex interrelationship between linguistic ideologies and practices. The book focuses both on language domination and sites of "resistance" to dominant language ideologies.
