Journal of East Asian Studies 14 (2014), 149–150

The Contributors

Jason P. Abbott is the Aung San Suu Kyi Endowed Chair in Asian Democracy and the director of the Center for Asian Democracy at the University of Louisville–Kentucky. He is the author or editor of five books and over twenty articles and book chapters on issues of democratization, economic development, political economy, and regional security in Southeast Asia, and Malaysia in particular.

Kevin Fahey is a graduate student in the political science PhD program at Florida State University. He received his Master of Arts in political science from the University of Louisville in 2012.

Dafydd Fell is the reader in comparative politics with special reference to Taiwan at the Department of Politics and International Studies, School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London. He is also the director of the SOAS Centre of Taiwan Studies. His recent books include Party Politics in Taiwan (2005) and Government and Politics in Taiwan (2011). He has a forthcoming coedited volume, titled Migration to and from Taiwan (2014).

Olli Hellmann is lecturer in politics at the University of Sussex. His research interests include party politics and informal institutions (in particular, corruption and clientelism). He is the author of Political Parties and Electoral Strategy: The Development of Party Organization in East Asia (2011) and has published in a number of peer-reviewed journals, including Party Politics, Government and Opposition, and Asian Survey.

Liesbet Hooghe is W. R. Kenan Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and chair in Multilevel Governance at the VU University Amsterdam. Her interests lie in multilevel governance, decentralization, international organization, elite studies, and public opinion. Recent books include The European Commission in the 21st Century (2013) and The Rise of Regional Authority: A Comparative Study of 42 OECD Democracies (2010).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1598240800009668 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Gary Marks is Burton Craige Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and chair in Multilevel Governance at the VU University Amsterdam. In 2010 he was awarded a Humboldt Research Prize for his contributions to political science. He is currently coediting the Transformations in Governance series from Oxford University Press.

Sarah Shair-Rosenfield is assistant professor in the School of Politics and Global Studies at Arizona State University. Her research focuses on the intersection between comparative political institutions and representation, with particular emphasis on the effects of electoral reforms on political parties, minority groups, and democratization in Southeast Asia and Latin America. Her recent work has been published in Electoral Studies and the Journal of Politics in Latin America.

Xin Sun (xinsun2013@u.northwestern.edu) is a PhD candidate in the Department of Political Science at Northwestern University. He studies the politics of authoritarian regimes broadly and Chinese politics specifically. His research interests include village elections in China, land politics, and political methodology. His recent works have appeared in Political Studies, Journal of Comparative Economics, China Journal, and Journal of Contemporary China.

Yiping Wu (ypwu.1977@gmail.com) is associate professor in the School of Public Economics and Administration at Shanghai University of Finance and Economics. His research interests lie in Chinese economy, industrial organizations, and institutional economics. His research has appeared in several journals, including Management World and Social Science Journal.

Jiangnan Zhu (zhujn@hku.hk, corresponding author) is assistant professor in the Department of Politics and Public Administration at the University of Hong Kong. She is interested in Chinese politics, especially corruption and anticorruption in China. Her research articles have appeared in several journals, including Comparative Political Studies, Journal of Contemporary China, China Review, Asian Survey, Social Science Journal, Journal of Chinese Political Science, and Chinese Economy.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1598240800009668 Published online by Cambridge University Press