REFORMULATING THE REFORMATION – A. G. DICKENS: HIS WORK AND INFLUENCE

A Conference at the University of Hull, 1–2 November 2002

This conference will assess the profound impact of the work of A. G. Dickens on Reformation studies, not only in England, but also internationally. Speakers have been invited to reflect a range of responses to his work and to assess it in the light of contemporary scholarship. They include Andrew Pettegree (St Andrews), Christopher Haigh (Oxford), Kaspar von Greyerz (Basle), Eamon Duffy (Cambridge) and Claire Cross (York). Patrick Collinson will introduce and provide a summing up of the conference proceedings.

The University of Hull is hosting this conference, with the support of the German Historical Institute, London, and the Institute of Historical Research, in recognition of Dickens's long association with Hull. He was born and bred in the city and was G. F. Grant Professor at the university between 1945 and 1962. His book Lollards and Protestants in the diocese of York was published during this time, when he also began his classic account of The English Reformation.

Further details are available from Dr Rod Ambler (R.W.Ambler @hull.ac.uk) and Professor Glenn Burgess (P.G.Burgess@hull.ac.uk), Department of History, the University of Hull, Hull HU6 7RX, co-organisers of the conference. It is hoped that it will be possible to provide some assistance to junior researchers who may wish to attend the conference.

THE CENTRE FOR REFORMATION STUDIES, EMANUEL UNIVERSITY OF ORADEA, ROMANIA

The Centre for Reformation Studies was founded in 1996 as a research department within Emanuel University of Oradea. Its primary objective is to present the theology and history of the Protestant Reformation of the sixteenth century to the Romanian people in their native tongue for the enlargement of God's kingdom and to the benefit of Romanian Christianity. The Centre is not only concerned with theology: the history, politics, economics, philosophy and sociology of the Reformation are all part of the research being developed at the Centre.

The activities of the Centre for Reformation Studies fall into six main categories:

1. Translation of primary sources.
2. Translation of relevant secondary sources.
3. The establishment of research with the purpose of developing the Centre for Reformation Studies into a department, issuing MTh., MPhil. and DPhil. diplomas in historical theology.
4. Publication of research articles.
5. The establishment of a Reformation Library. The Centre for Reformation Studies is very interested in the acquisition of any books on the Reformation (the works of the Reformers and any other book on Protestant theology, history, etc.).
6. To share with churches and pastors, by means of books and seminars etc., the results of the research undertaken by its members and contributors.

The Centre for Reformation Studies welcomes suggestions and support. Prospective contributors who would like to publish an article in the periodical issue on Reformation Studies hosted by the theological journal Perichoresis are most welcome to contact us. For more information, please write to:
