Contributors

Glen Gendzel is assistant professor of history at San Jose State University. He specializes in California politics and culture in the Progressive Era. He has published articles in Business History Review, the Journal of Interdisciplinary History, Western Historical Quarterly, Southern California Quarterly, and the Blackwell Companion to Twentieth-Century America.

Susan Goodier is an independent scholar revising for publication her dissertation, "The Other Women's Rights Movement: Anti-Suffragism in New York State, 1865–1932."

Julia F. Irwin is about to defend her doctorate in history, with a concentration in the history of medicine and science, at Yale University and will be a visiting instructor in history at Southern Connecticut State University starting in fall 2009. She is currently finishing her book manuscript, tentatively titled "Humanitarian Occupations: Foreign Relief and Assistance in America's International Identities."

Richard S. Lowry, associate professor of English at the College of William and Mary, has published work on the photographers A. J. Russell and Lewis Hine and on childhood. Author of Littery Man: Mark Twain and Modern Authorship (1996), he is at work on a project on Mark Twain and Abraham Lincoln.

David Macleod teaches history at Central Michigan University and is editor of the Michigan Historical Review. His publications include Building Character in the American Boy: The Boy Scouts, YMCA, and Their Forerunners, 1870–1920 (1983) and The Age of the Child: Children in America, 1890–1920 (1998).

Edward H. Miller is a doctoral candidate at Boston College. He was previously research director of the Massachusetts legislature's Joint Committee on Public Service, the same committee that passed the state civil service law back in 1884.

Lewis Perry is John Francis Bannon Professor of History, emeritus, at Saint Louis University. His books include Intellectual Life in America: A History (1984), and he is writing a history of civil disobedience in which Abby Smith and Her Cows will be treated as a classic work.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400001274 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Linda Przybyszewski is associate professor of history at the University of Notre Dame and a member of the editorial board of this journal. She is the author of The Republic According to John Marshall Harlan (1999) and is working on a history of the Cincinnati Bible War of 1869.

Christopher Waldrep is professor of history at San Francisco State University and the author most recently of African Americans Confront Lynching: Strategies of Resistance from the Civil War to the Civil Rights Era (2008).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400001274 Published online by Cambridge University Press