INTERNATIONAL LAW:
100 WAYS
IT SHAPES OUR LIVES

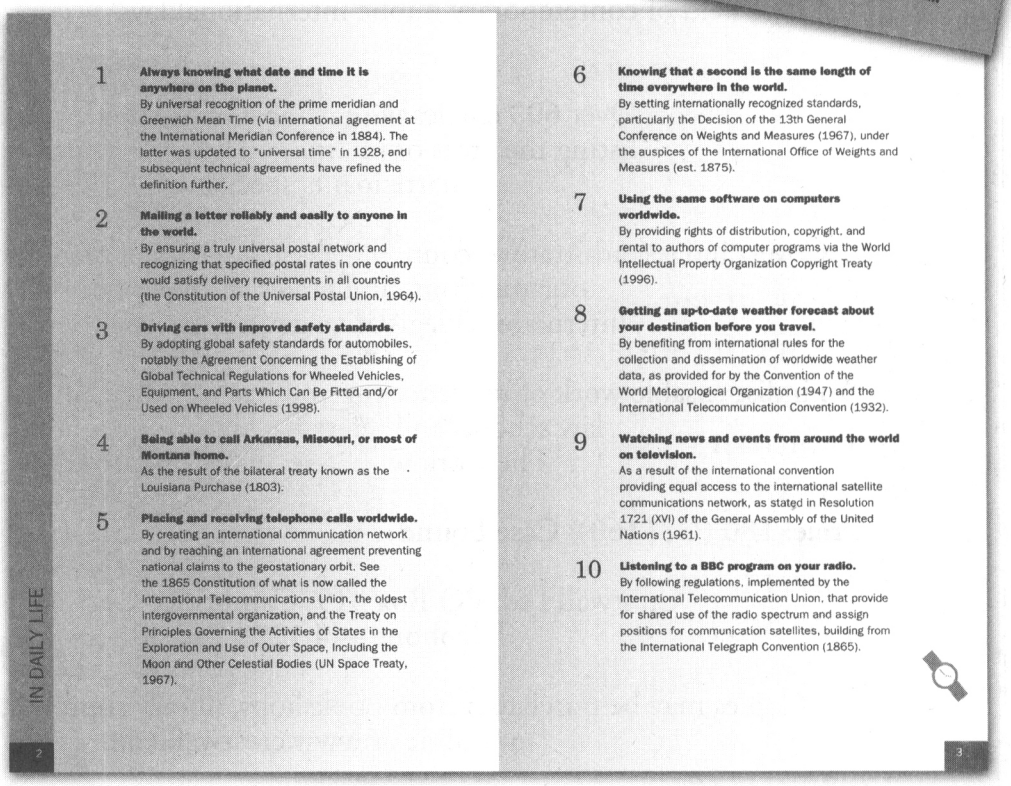

Many find international law abstract and static. Topics such as war and peace or relationships between countries are considered by some to be not so much questions of law, but of power and influence. Others question the existence of international law.

International Law: 100 Ways It Shapes Our Lives was conceived from the proposition that international law not only exists, but also penetrates more deeply and broadly into everyday life than is generally recognized. Some ways are of relatively recent vintage, while others are long-standing. 100 examples were identified by ASIL members, vetted by a smaller group of experts, and organized into seven chapters: 1) daily life; 2) leisure; 3) travel; 4) commerce 5) health and the environment; 6) personal liberty; 7) public safety and global security.

Join us in demonstrating how international law shapes our lives by

- Visiting 100 Ways at http://www.asil100.org/ways.html;
- Using it in teaching and general civic education programs;
- Adding ways to the list; and
- Sharing your experiences using International Law: 100 Ways It Shapes Our Lives.

We hope that this creative and interactive project will help demonstrate the diversity and the centrality of international law to our lives today.

Global Corruption Report 2007

Corruption in Judicial Systems

Compiled by Transparency International

The Global Corruption Report 2007 looks at how, why and where corruption mars judicial processes, and reflects on remedies for corruption-tainted systems. The book focuses on judges and courts but situates them within the broader justice system — police, prosecutors, lawyers and agencies responsible for enforcing judicial decisions. It also looks at the social context of the judiciary and shows how societal expectations, the existence of non-state justice mechanisms and the strength of informal networks that circumvent the justice system, all have a bearing on judicial corruption. The volume takes a close look at the two main judicial corruption problems: political interference and petty bribery by court personnel. 37 country case studies and a series of concrete recommendations for judges, political powers, businesses, lawyers, prosecutors, academics, NGOs and donors are supplemented by 15 empirical studies of corruption in various sectors, including the justice sector.

Foreword

From its beginning, the Society established as one of its primary functions the regular collection, publication, and dissemination of important international legal materials. These materials were first published as a section of the American Journal of International Law, and since the 1960s as the current stand-alone International Legal Materials publication. The publication met a critical need in that earlier era — when access to primary source legal materials was limited. Today, access to information is no longer a problem. Indeed, our challenge is too much information. And therein we find a continuing mission for International Legal Materials.

The dramatic growth in the international legal field makes it nearly impossible for scholars and practitioners — let alone the general public — to keep abreast of the most important international legal developments. Fortunately they can rely on our staff and Editorial Advisory Committee to sift through the vast array of documents, identify those that are truly significant, and highlight them in International Legal Materials and our bi-monthly electronic bulletin, International Law in Brief. The Society's periodic ASIL Insights provide additional analysis of particularly high-profile developments.

Beginning in 2007, we are supplementing all documents published in International Legal Materials with an introductory note from one of the many experts ASIL counts among its members. These notes will provide summaries of the documents and key insights into their significance. This month's collection features notes by Charles Mooney, Hal Burman, Mark Kantor, Chuck Michel, Viren Mascarenhas, Bruce Zagaris, Stephanie Farrior, Rakhee Vemulapalli, David Stewart, Charles Owen Verrill, Kevin Futch, and Holly Koehler. We are extremely grateful to these authors, and we are confident that you will value their contributions as well.

Please send us your comments and suggestions as we continue our efforts to meet the evolving needs of the international legal community.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Andersen
Chair

INTERNATIONAL LEGAL MATERIALS®

Note from the Managing Editor

This volume of International Legal Materials presents a rich diversity of international law documents. Two of the documents discuss the extra-territorial application of jurisdiction, albeit in quite different contexts: the House of Lords decision Al-Skeini v. Secretary of State addresses the possible applicability of the UK Human Rights Act to British soldiers for the killing of Iraqi citizens in Basra; while the High Court of Canada decision in R. v. Hape examines it in the context of the constitutionality of searches and seizures that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police conducted in the Turks and Caicos. The United States Supreme Court Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act decision Permanent Mission of India to the United Nations v. New York, is intriguing both because Justice Thomas penned it, and because of its broader possible ramifications in the area of taxation of international organizations. The European Court of Human Rights judgment, Behrami v. France, in which the court held that it lacks the competence under the European Convention on Human Rights to examine states' contributions in Kosovo in fulfillment of their duties pursuant to a UN Security Council Chapter VII resolution, raises fascinating, and at times troubling issues regarding the inter-relationship of international organizations.

This volume of International Legal Materials provides twelve introductory notes to the legal texts, and I would like to thank all of the authors who took time away from their summer to write a piece for us. I am particularly grateful to the contributions from the members of the Editorial Advisory Board who wrote introductory notes for this volume: David Stewart, Charles Owen Verrill, and Bruce Zagaris. Two introductory note authors: Kevin Futch, and Rakhee Vemulapalli, served as legal interns on the International Law in Brief at ASIL this summer, and their work demonstrates that we have much to anticipate from the future generation of international lawyers.

Statement of Editorial Policy

International Legal Materials is a core publication of The American Society of International Law that reproduces texts of documents reflecting the broad scope and evolution of international law. The range of covered subjects has expanded from traditional topics such as international organizations, jurisdiction, and international trade to include developments in fields such as intellectual property, environmental law, nuclear non-proliferation, human rights, and international criminal law.

International Legal Materials serves as both a bi-monthly information service and a widely recognized archive of international law documents for a diverse, global community of legal scholars, government officials, private practitioners and institutions sharing a common interest in international law. To meet the varied demands of such a readership, documents are selected from world-wide sources on the basis of their present and future legal significance.

International Legal Materials is prepared for publication in Washington, D.C. with both the advice of the Editorial Advisory Committee and the assistance of Corresponding Editors around the world. In order to reproduce the texts of selected documents under tight production schedules, the best available source is used, whether electronic or printed.

Guidelines for Submission of Documents

The ILM Office welcomes any effort to bring suitable documents to the Office's attention. Electronic files or web links are required for publication, although printed texts can be used for initial deliberations regarding republication.

The authenticity (i.e. official version status) of submitted documents must be easily verifiable. This is facilitated by submitting files or print versions which are clearly attributable to the original source, or by providing links to documents on the original source's official website.

If the official version of a document is not available in English, an unofficial translation is acceptable. The original text must accompany such a translation.

Introductory Notes

Introductory Notes are brief articles from one to three pages in length which are intended to provide background information for a document reproduced in ILM.

For example, an Introductory Note for a treaty might include a short history of the negotiations, the dates of signature and entry into force. An Introductory Note for legislation would give its history and international significance, while one for judicial proceedings would provide the background of the case.

The views of authors in Introductory Notes are their own and do not necessarily reflect those of either the American Society of International Law or the Managing Editor.

Acceptance of Materials and Corrections

Print submissions cannot be returned. Translators and others submitting material will be notified of the acceptance of their document for publication.

Once a translation or Introductory Note has been accepted for reproduction, The American Society of International Law will send a publication agreement to the author.

Translators and Introductory Note Authors shall be acknowledged in International Legal Materials.

In some cases minor editorial or typographical alterations may be made without contacting the author or translator. Major corrections will be sent to the author or translator for approval. Corrected Introductory Notes or translations must be returned within the time specified.

International Law In Brief

The Attorney-Editors of International Legal Materials also publish the e-mail newsletter International Law In Brief, which contains objective abstracts of recently released documents pertinent to international law.

Documents abstracted in International Law In Brief are later considered for reproduction in International Legal Materials.

A complete International Law In Brief archive is located at The American Society of International Law website (http://www.asil.org). A search engine provides an easy way to find abstracts of specific documents.

The International Law In Brief publication is free, but has an independent subscription.
