Contributors

Richard Bensel is professor and associate chair in the Department of Government at Cornell University, as well as president of the Politics and History Section of the American Political Science Association. His primary fields are American politics and political economy, with specific interests in American political development, parties and elections, the U.S. Congress, and comparative state formation. He is the author, most recently, of Passion and Preferences: William Jennings Bryan and the 1896 Democratic National Convention (2008), The American Ballot Box in the Mid-Nineteenth Century (2004), and The Political Economy of American Industrialization, 1877–1900 (Cambridge, 2000). Among his other publications are Yankee Leviathan: The Origins of Central State Authority in America, 1859–1877 (1990) and Sectionalism and American Political Development, 1880–1980 (1984).

Rebecca Edwards is Eloise Ellery Professor of History at Vassar College. She is the author of Angels in the Machinery: Gender in American Party Politics from the Civil War to the Progressive Era (1997) and New Spirits: Americans in the Gilded Age, 1865–1905 (2006, second edition forthcoming, 2011). She is currently researching People's Party orator Mary Elizabeth Lease and will coauthor the next edition of James Henretta et al., America's History.

Richard R. John is a professor at the Columbia University School of Journalism, where he teaches courses on the history of communication. His publications include many articles and two books: Spreading the News: The American Postal System from Franklin to Morse (1995) and Network Nation: Inventing American Telecommunications (forthcoming, 2010).

John Thomas McGuire is an adjunct associate professor of history at SUNY, Tompkins Cortland Community College in Dryden, New York. A contributor of articles and book reviews to the Journal of American History, Journal of Urban History, and other publications, he is working on a manuscript that analyzes social-justice feminism during the 1930s.

Martin Meeker is a historian with the Regional Oral History Office of the Bancroft Library at the University of California–Berkeley. He is author of Contact Desired: Gay and Lesbian Communications and Community, 1940s–1970s (2006).

William B. Murphy is a visiting assistant professor in the History Department at SUNY at Oswego. He received his PhD at Syracuse University, where his

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400001407 Published online by Cambridge University Press

dissertation, "Direct Election of U.S. Senators and the Transformation of American Politics," was a winner of the University Dissertation Prize in 2006.

Christopher McKnight Nichols is Andrew W. Mellon postdoctoral fellow in the History Department at the University of Pennsylvania. With Charles Mathewes, he edited Prophesies of Godlessness: Predictions of America's Imminent Secularization from the Puritans to the Present (2008) and is author of the forthcoming book, From Empire to Isolation: Internationalism and Isolationism in American Thought.

Nancy J. Rosenbloom is professor of history at Canisius College, Buffalo, New York. She is author of Women in American History Since 1880: A Documentary Reader (forthcoming) and has published on film and censorship in the Progressive Era. Her current research focuses on the life and work of Sonya Levien, one of the most influential women screenwriters in early Hollywood.

Stuart Schaar is professor emeritus of history at Brooklyn College, CUNY, and coeditor of The Middle East and Islamic World Reader (2003).

Robert E. Weir, author of five books on social and labor history, teaches American history at Smith College and serves as executive secretary of the Northeast Popular culture/American Culture Association. He was a Fulbright scholar in New Zealand during 2001.

Peter W. Williams is Distinguished Professor of Comparative Religion and American Studies at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. He is the author of Houses of God: Region, Religion, and Architecture in the United States (1997) and is currently at work on Religion, Art, and Money: Episcopalians and American Culture from the Civil War to the Depression.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400001407 Published online by Cambridge University Press