NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Elizabeth Ferguson is an Assistant Professor in the History Department at the University of Toronto. Her key research interests are in the development of English Catholicism in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. She is working on print culture networks between England and the continent, and is currently preparing a book on devotional literature and English Catholic practice, c.1570–1640.

Peter Holmes recently retired as Head of Political and Social Sciences at Hills Road Sixth Form College, Cambridge. His research interests are largely in Tudor and Stuart Catholic history, and in the history of philosophy. He has written a number of books and articles in this field, including Resistance and Compromise: The Political Thought of the Elizabethan Catholics, which was recently re-issued as a paperback by CUP. The Catholic Record Society published in 2012 his edition of a work of moral philosophy by the seventeenth-century Jesuit, Thomas Southwell, under the title, Caroline Casuistry.

Dara Kaye recently graduated from the Shakespeare in History MA course at University College, London, where her dissertation on nineteenth-century women's Shakespeare adaptations for children earned the 2012 John Oliver Hobbes Memorial Scholarship Prize. A 2009 graduate of Smith College in Northampton, MA, USA, she was a Fulbright Fellow in South Korea from 2009 to 2011. She currently works at Ross Yoon, a nonfiction literary agency in Washington, DC.

Margaret Turnham received her doctorate from Nottingham University in 2012 with a thesis entitled 'Roman Catholic Revivalism: A study of the area that became the Diocese of Middlesbrough 1778–1992'. She is currently preparing it for publication in late 2014/15. She has also published material in Northern Catholic History and has begun work on a compendium of the priests who have worked in the diocese of Middlesbrough from its creation in 1878.

John R. Yamamoto-Wilson is Associate Professor in the Department of English Literature, Sophia University, Tokyo.
