In the News . . .

Barry Rabe, University of Michigan, National Public Radio's Talk of the Nation, on American climate change policy options.

Nelson Wikstrom, Virginia Commonwealth University, Richmond Times Dispatch, on the current state of the Philippines.

Shanto Iyengar, Stanford University, CBS News, on forecasting models in the presidential election.

Jon Miller, Michigan State University, USA Today, on scientific literacy.

Gerald McBeath, University of Alaska in Fairbanks, Bloomberg, on Senator Ted Stevens.

Larry Sabato, University of Virginia, and Dennis Goldford, Drake University, U.S. News and World Report, on the voting trends of college students.

Eduardo A. Gamarra, Florida International University, New York Times, on the Bolivian recall.

Robert Stein, Rice University, Houston Chronicle, on Rep. John Culberson's ability to position himself for political advantage.

Lucian Pye, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Baltimore Sun, on the problems of dependency theory.

Kerry Haynie, Duke University, USA Today, on the affects of John Edwards's affair.

David Shambaugh, George Washington University, New York Times, on the Chinese Communist Party's ability to adapt.

James Thurber, American University, USA Today, on lobbyist involvement in parties' national conventions.

Marty Wiseman, Mississippi State University, U.S. News and World Report, on Obama increasing African American voter turnout.

Susan MacManus, University of South Florida, Minneapolis Star Tribune, public opinion and gas prices.

Stephen Wasby, University of Albany, Daily Journal, on judicial ethics and the Ninth Circuit Court.

David Laitin, Stanford University, Washington Post, on loyalty within terrorist organizations.

David Lanoue, University of Alabama, USA Today, on the presidential election.

Thomas F. Schaller, University of Maryland Baltimore County, CBS News, on Obama campaigning in the South.

Todd Donovan, Western Washington University, Seattle Times, on the Washington gubernatorial election.

George Conner, Missouri State University, Kansas City Star, on the image of politicians.

Bert Rockman, Purdue University, Chicago Tribune, on the effects of the digital age in the Obama campaign.

Paul C. Light, New York University, New York Times, on the composition of the Bush administration in its final days.

Bruce Cain, University of California Washington Center, MSNBC, on Obama's fundraising.

Alan Abramowitz, Emory University, New York Times, on Obama's relationship with Jesse Jackson.

Michael Dawson, University of Chicago, Seattle Times, on the NAACP and the presidential candidates.

Charles Bullock, University of Georgia, Chicago Tribune, on Obama making endorsements.

James Gimpel, University of Maryland, Washington Times, on independent voters in the presidential election.

Jennifer Lawless, Brown University, and Barbara Burrell, Northern Illinois University, Los Angeles Times, on Obama's campaign strategy.

Rodolfo Espino, Arizona State University, Boston Globe, on McCain trying to appeal to Latino voters.

John Geer, Vanderbilt University, National Public Radio's Talk of the Nation, on why campaign attack ads help democracy.

Roger Pielke Jr., University of Colorado, San Francisco Chronicle, on presidential declarations of natural disasters increasing during re-election.

Dale Herspring, Kansas State University, Manhattan Mercury, on Georgia's president underestimating the Russian military.

Caroline Heldman, Occidental College, Observer, on the potential surge in post-racial campaigns if Obama wins the White House.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096508291298 Published online by Cambridge University Press