Hollymoor Mental Hospital, Birmingham.

Present: Thirteen members. Dr. T. C. Graves presided.

Dr. H. E. BROWN read a paper, showing the actual cases, bearing on the association of sensory disturbances of the scalp and involvements of the accessory sinuses, etc., of the nose.

In all cases there was muscular headache, practically defined by the limits of the attachment of the temporal muscle on the side affected, and apparently due to spasm of that muscle.

Active surgical treatment had led to the disappearance of the headache.

Afterwards Dr. F. A. PICKWORTH showed a number of lantern-slides illustrating sinusitis, and later in the laboratory gave an excellent demonstration of the actual specimens.

A very interesting and extremely stimulating afternoon was spent.
