JOURNAL OF LAW AND SOCIETY

Edited by P. A. Thomas

The journal provides a platform for discussing law on an inter-disciplinary basis within the social sciences. It is widely read in law faculties and by sociologists, psychologists, social workers and everyone concerned with the rights of women, racial minorities and the disadvantaged.

Making Bureaucracies Think

The Environmental Impact Statement Strategy of Administrative Reform

Serge Taylor. The central concern of this book is the social intelligence that goes into environmental decisions—how environmental impacts can be recognized beforehand so that less costly trade-offs can be explored, relative risks assessed, and choices made in a manner acceptable to both the public and the government. The book evaluates the first 10 years of the Environmental Impact Statement process of the 1969 National Environmental Policy Act—in particular how it has worked in the Forest Service and the Army Corps of Engineers. It assesses how successful the EIS process has been in establishing a concern for environmental values in the federal bureaucracy, and how widely applicable the general impact statement approach is in other policy areas. $29.50

Policy Studies Journal and Policy Studies Review

Questions, Answers, and Experts

The Policy Studies Journal and the Policy Studies Review are designed to raise questions and offer answers. In doing so, both periodicals call upon experts on the general approaches and specific policy problems involved in policy studies. Some of the questions that have been addressed in recent issues of PSJ and/or PSR include:

1. How can one determine the effects of alternative public policies?
2. How can policy evaluation be used to maximize societal benefits minus societal costs in choosing among alternative policies?
3. How can we facilitate the utilization of policy evaluation research by policy-makers and policy-appliers?
4. How can governmental institutions be made more effective, efficient, and equitable in formulating and implementing policy decisions?
5. How can we facilitate more interaction across academic disciplines that are relevant to policy evaluation?
6. How can we facilitate more comparisons across nations, states, and cities concerning alternative public policies?
7. What policies are most appropriate for facilitating international peace and mutually beneficial trade relations?
8. How can we minimize inflation, unemployment, poverty, crime, discrimination, pollution, disease, and illiteracy through more effective public policy?
9. How can we maximize food, energy, technological innovation, freedom of communication, fair judicial procedure, and productivity through more effective public policy?
10. What goals should public policy be seeking to achieve and what obligations do policy analysts have for achieving those goals?

Some of the experts who have recently edited special PSJ/PSR issues, edited PSO books, authored PSJ/PSR articles, and/or authored PSO book chapters include in random order:

William Dunn	Gordon Tullock	Dan Mazmanian	John Grumm
Theodore Lowi	Marian Palley	Douglas Ashford	John Gardiner
Dale Marshall	Aaron Wildavsky	Douglas Rae	William Coplin
Alan Altshuler	Richard Merritt	Dennis Judd	Thomas Dye
Joseph Haberer	Alex Groth	Charles Jones	Matthew Holden, Jr.
Alan Stone	Susan Welch	Kenneth Dolbeare	Dan Elazar
Harmon Zeigler	David Rosenbloom	Gerald Caiden	Robert Lawrence
George Frederickson	Mel Dubnick	Carol Weiss	Don Hadwiger
Mark Schneider	Leroy Rieselbach	Virginia Gray	Stephen Wasby
Charles Wise	Louis Masotti	Michael Kraft	Frederick Wirt
Dean Mann	Frank Scioli	Robert Lineberry	James Anderson
Samuel Gove	Dennis Palumbo	Larry Wade	Dorothy James
Ed Kolodziej	Bernard Grofman	Edward Tufte	Warren Samuels

If you would like to participate in the question and answer process which the PSJ PSR experts provide, all you have to do is send a check for $16 to the Policy Studies Organization, 361 Lincoln Hall, University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois 61801. In return you will receive four big issues a year of the Policy Studies Journal, four big issues a year of the Policy Studies Review, two or more PSO Directories, discounts on all the PSO books, and other benefits. We also welcome questions, answers, and expertise in the form of articles submitted by PSO members and others.
