https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781412000345 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Contributors, October 2012 (11.4)

Paul Blanc holds the Endowed Chair in Occupational Medicine at the University of California, San Francisco and is author of How Every Day Products Make People Sick: Toxins at Home and In the Workplace (2009).

John D. Buenker is professor emeritus at the University of Wisconsin–Parkside. His many books include The History of Wisconsin: The Progressive Era (1998) and the three-volume Encyclopedia of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era (2005), edited with his son, Joseph. His latest publication is "Progressivism Triumphant: The 1911 Wisconsin Legislature" in the State of Wisconsin Blue Book, 2011–2012.

Daniel W. Crofts is a professor of history at the College of New Jersey. His works include Reluctant Confederates: Upper South Unionists in the Secession Crisis (1989), Old Southampton: Politics and Society in a Virginia County, 1834–1869 (1992), Cobb's Ordeal: The Diaries of a Virginia Farmer, 1842–1872 (1997), and as explained in his essay for this issue, A Secession Crisis Enigma: William Henry Hurlbert and "The Diary of a Public Man" (2010). He has been a frequent contributor to the "Disunion" blog, a series of online essays published by the New York Times to mark the sesquicentennial of the American Civil War.

Elizabeth Faue is a professor of history at Wayne State University. She is the author of Community of Suffering and Struggle: Women, Men and the Labor Movement in Minneapolis, 1915–1945 (1991) and Writing the Wrongs: Eva Valesh and the Rise of Labor Journalism (2002), as well as a forthcoming study of the labor movement in the twentieth century.

Jim Hoy is a professor of English at Emporia State University, where he directs the Center for Great Plains Studies. His works include Flint Hills Cowboys: Tales from the Tallgrass Prairie (2006) and Cowboy's Lament: Life on the Open Range (2010).

Kathryn Allamong Jacob is curator of manuscripts at the Schlesinger Library on the History of Women in America at the Radcliffe Institute, Harvard University. Her books include Capital Elites: High Society in Washington, D.C. after the Civil War (1994), Testament to Union: Civil War Monuments in Washington, D.C. (1998), and King of the Lobby: The Life and Times of Sam Ward, Man-About-Washington in the Gilded Age (2010), on which her essay in this issue is based. A former assistant historian of the U.S. Senate and assistant program director at the National Historical Publications and Record Commission, she was editor of the Guide to Research Collections of Former United States Senators (1983) and co-editor of the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress, 1774–1989 (1989).

Robert C. McGreevey is an assistant professor of history at The College of New Jersey. He is currently working on a book entitled, Borderline Citizens: The United States, Puerto Rico, and the Politics of Colonial Law and Migration, 1898–1948.

Timothy Messer-Kruse is a professor and chair of the Department of Ethnic Studies at Bowling Green State University. He is the author, among other works, of "Technology and the Decline of Child Labor in the Glass Bottle Industry: The Impact of the Owens Bottle Machine Reconsidered," Labor: Studies in Working Class History of the Americas 5 (Spring 2008): 23–45, along with "The Crusade for Honest Weight: Origins of an Overlooked Progressive Movement" in the July 2006 issue of this journal.

Michael E. Neagle recently completed his PhD at the University of Connecticut. The current article is drawn from his dissertation, "Isle of Pines, U.S.A.: The Other Side of American Expansion in Cuba, 1898–1960." His work has appeared in Latino America: A State-by-State Encyclopedia (2008), as well as in Red Brick in the Land of Steady Habits: Creating the University of Connecticut, 1881–2006 (2006).

E. Anthony Rotundo is the author of American Manhood: Transformations in Masculinity from the Revolution to the Modern Era (1993). He is Alfred E. Stearns Instructor of History and Social

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781412000345 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Science at Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts, and is at work on a study of manhood and modern conservatism.

T. Adams Upchurch, an associate professor at East Georgia College, is the author of Legislating Racism: The Billion Dollar Congress and the Birth of Jim Crow (2004); Race Relations in the United States, 1960–1980 (2008); Historical Dictionary of the Gilded Age (2009); Christian Nation? The United States in Popular Perception and Historical Reality (2010); and Abolition Movement (2011).

Stephen A. West is an associate professor of history at the Catholic University of America. He is co-editor of the Freedom: A Documentary History of Emancipation, series 3, vol. 2, Land and Labor, 1866–67, forthcoming from the University of North Carolina Press.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781412000345 Published online by Cambridge University Press