INTERNATIONAL REVIEW OF SOCIAL HISTORY

Instructions for Book Reviewers

Book reviews policy

Within the book reviews section, IRSH aims to focus on publications that fall into one or more of the following categories:

- covering a new subject or field within the broader range of social and labour history;
- covering a subject outside the traditional geographical or chronological focus of social and labour history (Europe and North America, nineteenth and twentieth century);
- using new research methods or methodologies;
- using a comparative perspective;
- giving a good overview of subject fields that are insufficiently covered in the English language literature;
- offering new results or perspectives on the more traditional subject fields of social and labour history, in particular by using newly available source materials or research methods.

Book reviews are usually published within six months of receipt. Upon approval, the book review editor will provide an estimated publication date. They reserve the right to change this date at short notice due to space constraints and the need to ensure a balanced mix of content in each issue.

Submission

Book reviewers are requested to send their reviews to the book reviews editor. Files must be saved in a recent version of MS Word for Windows. If in doubt, please contact the editorial team at: irsh@iisg.nl.

Reviews of single books in IRSH have a standard word length of c.1500 words. If reviewers wish to diverge from this, they should consult the book reviews editor first.

Invited reviewers are required to submit their review within six months of receiving the review copy of the book. They should notify the book reviews editor with sufficient notice if they are unable to comply with this time frame.

By submitting a review, you confirm that it has not been published previously and that you do not intend to publish it elsewhere.
